Seeing Self in Movies A Big Thrill

And now the big thrill! In the following, the fifth article of her series, "Ann Marsters in the Movies," Boston's noted girl reporter tells of seeing herself in actual scenes of the Paramount film, "High, Wide and Handsome." Follow this series daily in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 18 —I have seen myself in the movies!

If you have ever seen YOURself in the movies, you will understand that it is quite an experience to go through. And I have not entirely recovered from it.

I sat in the small projection theater at the Paramount studios while the previous day's "rushes" were run off. There were several important people around me—producers and directors and assistant directors. They sat and commented upon the scenes which were flashed on the screen, roaring with laughter over some, and speaking words of satisfaction over others.

A Crazy Dream

"Rushes" mean the showing of all the scenes shot during one day from the various pictures in production. So, of course, there isn't the least bit of continuity or sense to them.

One minute you are watching Barbara Stanwyck and Joel McCrea go over and over a mysterious bit of acting, and the next minute you see Gary Cooper being battered about the deck of a sinking ship. It's like something out of a crazy dream.

You hear the director call instructions, just before the scene begins, and the microphone picks up snatches of spontaneous laughter here and there on the set. Then you see an isolated little scene performed —and you wonder what it's all about.

The action is broken by the word, "Cut," from the director. That means that the scene itself is over, and for a flashing second you see the stars step out of character and become themselves. Sometimes they make a sour face, because they haven't liked their own acting, or because they have slipped up on their lines.

A sudden, inky blackness swallows them up for a moment. Then again a slate comes into view on which is printed the name of the picture, the director, and the number of the scene. So the scenes are repeated and repeated, with all these little incidental flashes and "asides" making it appear a pretty silly business—which, of course, it isn't.

Eventually, all these scenes from the various pictures, all these "takes," go to the cutting room where the best ones are

YOUTH SHOT DEAD IN MYSTERY

GUN, 'SUICIDE NOTE', TAGS ONLY CLUES

Suicide or murder?

It was only a few minutes after two o'clock this morning when someone pulled a citizen's alarm at the police box at Albany street and Broadway, South End.

Then a shot—or maybe two shots—sounded. A watchman at a nearby building heard groans. He saw a young man lying on some pilings of an old disused wharf on Fort Point channel.

The watchman telephoned police headquarters; but a squad car was on the way. Police said the young man was near death with a bullet hole in his head, when they arrived.

Beside him lay a .38 revolver, manufactured by the Harrington & Richardson Arms Company of Worcester, numbered 361,795. There were three cartridges in it. Two were discharged.

SUICIDE 'NOTE'

The youth's right hand clutched his breast and in a coat pocket was found two match cards, each with the message:

"I killed myself."

One didn't actually say that it said:

"I killed myse—"

He was a well-dressed young

Lindberghs Reach Bushire, Pershia

Bushire, Persia, Feb. 18 (INS)—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived here at 1:40 p. m. (6 M. E.) today after a hop from Basrah, Iraq, en route to the East on a leisurely aerial voyage. They planned to spend the night here.

Bahrein Island, Persian Gulf, Feb. 18. (AP)—The Charles A. Lindberghs, flying from Ruthan Wells, an oasis in the Syrian Desert, landed here at 1:30 p. m., G.M.T., (8:30 a. m. Eastern Standard Time) today.

Bahrein, the center of the famous Gulf pearl fishing industry, also is the scene of American oil operations.

En route, the Lindberghs landed at Basra, where the Tigris and Euphrates rivers meet, refueled and resumed their flight in less than an hour.

Mary Astor Married to Mexican

Yuma, Ariz., Feb. 18 (AP)—Mary Astor of film and diary fame eloped here today with Manuel Del Campo, young Latin American, who an hour later was en route alone to Mexico City.

She accompanied him by motor car as far as Mexicali, Lower Calif., where he boarded a plane. After kissing him good-by the film star would not admit they had been married.

The 25-year-old bridegroom had been called to the Mexican capital by the death from pneumonia there yesterday of his father. Five years her junior, he is described as a clean-cut man of medium height with polished manners and of light complexion.

SURPRISE ELOPEMENT

The couple arrived here after midnight in a chartered airplane. Hollywood friends, and Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, divorced husband of Mary Astor, were taken by surprise.

The elopement plane landed here. The couple, Mary wearing dark glasses, sped to the home of Superior Judge Henry C. Kelly and were wed.

Later the judge said he didn't really know it was Mary Astor. She gave the name of Lucille L. Thorpe, her maiden name having been Lucille Langhanke.

TRIES TO HALT STORY

Interviewers caught up with her at Mexicali and sought to suppress the news of her elopement saying she simply accompanied the insurance salesman to bid him farewell.

She did not attempt to explain, however, why the devious route of airplane to Yuma, with a visit to the marrying judge, thence by auto to Mexicali was taken.

The bride returned without her bridegroom from Mexicali, boarded her chartered airplane and took off for Los Angeles.

STATE FARM 'HOUSE OF HORRORS'

(This is the fourth of a series on conditions in the state's penal institutions, as seen from the inside. Massachusetts has long boasted of its fine institutions. The Boston State Hospital exposures have shaken this complacency; and here is the truth on th prisons, at Charlestown, Bridgewater, Concord and Norfolk.

By ALAN C. FRAZER
Boston Evening American Staff Writer

This is the worst, and the best, story I have ever attempted to write.

It is a story about life at its worst.

It is a story about something that the people, the legislators, the executives of Massachusetts, can change for the better.

No matter what they do, it remains bad enough.

It is a story I would rather forget.

Here are the so-called criminal insane, locked away in cells with solid steel doors. Some in cages within the black cells. Sleeping on mattresses laid on bare cement floors.

They tear their beds apart, if they have beds, and lash out at the guards with the pieces of lumber. That's why they haven't any beds.

Farnsworth Asks To Change Plea

Washington, Feb. 18 (AP)—John S. Farnsworth, former naval officer charged with conspiring to communicate naval secrets to the Japanese, asked permission of the Federal District Court to change his plea to "not guilty."

He threw himself on the mercy of the court on Monday, pleading nolo contendre—that he would not fight the charge.

He said today that plea was made under "enormous pressure" and finally "on the flip of a coin."

Roosevelt, Jr., Plans Virginia Law Study

Richmond, Va., Feb. 18 (AP)—An unidentified spokesman at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene du Pont here said today Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., and his fiancee Miss Ethel du Pont, left Richmond this morning for Charlottesville, where young Roosevelt was considering plans for entering the University of Virginia Law School next year.

The informant, who declined to give his name, said he could give no further information on how long Roosevelt and Miss Du Pont would be in Virginia.

Passengers on a Florida-New York train reported the President's son and Miss Du Pont left the train here yesterday.

In New Child Labor Clashes

State House guards were called at the child labor hearing today when labor representatives protested alleged "irregularities" and two-thirds of those present walked out. Frank Fenton, American Federation of Labor representative shown here as guards arrive.

Boston Evening American Photos

Just a few minutes after Alfred Baker Lewis, Socialist candidate for governor, spoke today in favor of child labor amendment ratification at the State House, labor leaders and other proponents walked out of the hearing in protest over a committee ruling. They picketed the State House.

CHILD LABOR BACKERS QUIT IN UPROAR

BULLETIN

On orders of Mayor Mansfield, the city licensing division today granted a permit to the state branch of the American Federation of Labor to hold a mass meeting tomorrow between 4 and 7 p. m. at the Parkman Bandstand on Boston Common for the purpose of urging ratification of the Child Labor Amendment.

With boos, catcalls and jeers filling Gardner Auditorium, labor representatives and other proponents of child labor amendment ratification walked out of the hearing room today in protest against a committee ruling.

With them, at the noisiest demonstration in recent years at a hearing, departed one of the committee members, Representative Paul McCarthy, Democrat, of Somerville, who also protested the ruling.

Although approximately two-thirds of those in the auditorium walked out, the hearing was ordered continued, with the opponents being heard.

The hearing blowup, climaxing bitterness over child labor amendment ratification in Massachusetts, which has stretched out a decade and a half, came a short time after today's session of the hearing had begun.

From Gardner Auditorium, many of those who had withdrawn from the hearing after State House guards had been rallied, went to the Beacon street sidewalk in front of the capitol and began picketing.

CHANT DEMANDS

"We'll picket the State House for a month, if necessary, until we get a fair hearing," declared Frank Fenton, New England representative of the American Federation of Labor and one of those in line.

As the picketers patroled the sidewalk in front of the State House main entrance, several sang "Solidarity Forever," while others chanted from time to time:

"We demand a fair hearing on the child labor amendment. We

Six children were rescued and 19 persons were driven from their homes during a two-alarm fire in a three-story wooden block at 91-95 Medford street, Malden, today. Damage was estimated at $5000.

Mrs. Frank Deveau rose from her sick bed on the second floor to carry out her month old son, Ronald. Her sister-in-law, Mrs. Andrew Deveau, carried her son, Albert, four months.

Frank Higgins, of Main street, after sounding the alarm, went to the top floor and roused Melvin Hayes, 21, who was asleep. The two men carried out three children of Mrs. Elmer Goudreau, Raymond, one; Beatrice, six, and Frances, one.

Mrs. Elsie Burnham, housekeeper for James F. Pringle on the second floor, saved Pringle's four-year-old son.

From the third floor Mrs. Lawrence Stanley and her two sons, Arthur, 16, and Lawrence, Jr., 13, made their way down the smoke-filled stairways. Also driven from the top floor were the five children of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Sweet: Ruth, 18; Loretta, 16; Rose, 15; Clarence, 12, and Robert, 6.

U. S. READY TO MATCH ENGLAND'S NAVAL PROGRAM

HIGH COMMAND IS AWAITING FINAL LONDON PLANS

By WALTER FITZMAURICE

Washington, Feb. 18 (US)—President Roosevelt consenting, the naval high command will ask appropriations to match the vast British naval construction program ton for ton, its highest ranking officer indicated today.

Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of operations, commenting at a special press conference on the 7500 million dollar British program, declared it a "fair presumption" that if any other power expands its navy the United States will do likewise.

Responsible army officers disclosed meantime that the British plan for additional infantry and tank battalions, military airdromes and expanded air force personnel will not affect the War Department's five-year army rehabilitation plan.

U. S. TO BUILD, TOO

The naval section of the British program, announced in an official white paper, calls for a start on April on three indeed of two 35,000-ton battleships, two aircraft carriers and seven cruisers.

Admiral Leahy said:

"This country seems committed to the principle of a fleet second to none. If any foreign power builds new ships, whether in additions or replacements, we will have to build ships of equal power.

"No decisive steps will be taken until we have more information from London. The President, of course, will decide the navy's policy."

Leahy said accurate information did not disclose whether the British battleships were additions or replacements. He "assumed" the airplane carriers were replacements.

SEEK NO DELAY

Present United States naval estimates are 564 million dollars. Awaiting hearings before a House appropriations subcommittee, they carry 315 million for naval construction, of which 25 millions is earmarked for a start on 10th replacement battleship.

Regardless of future London developments, Leahy said the Navy would seek no delay of authorizational action to alter the estimates. Officers pointed out another battleship would be included in a supplementary appropriation bill.

Leahy indicated the Navy will not attempt to match Britain in aircraft carriers or cruisers, but would compensate for the new British tonnage in these categories by building submarines or destroyers. The fleet has a surplus of average tonnage in these classes.

Nor will the British plan to mount 14-inch guns on its new battleships influence the Navy's choice between the 14 and 16-inch weapon, Leahy said.

The high command has until April 1 to make a decision, the choice depending on whether Japan adheres to the 14-inch limitation in the 1936 London naval treaty.

SEA LANES OPEN

Leahy declared pending neutrality legislation, under which the administration would bar America's merchant fleet from commerce with belligerents in war where the country was neutral will not affect navy policy.

That policy, as enunciated by the general board and approved by Secretary Swanson, requires the department:

"To create, maintain and operate a navy second to none and in conformity with treaty provisions; to maintain the fleet in sufficient strength to support the national policies and commerce, and to guard the Continental and overseas possessions."

Leahy pointed out that regardless of restrictions on shipping to belligerents the fleet would be found to keep sea lanes open for American ships trading with other countries.

REBELS VICTORS IN DRIVE; AIR BOMBS KILL 10

By the Associated Press

Insurgent victories dotted the Spanish war map today as Generalissimo Francisco Franco's men were hurled against government troops in mass offensives southeast of Madrid and a triple air attack left many dead and wounded in Madrid streets.

While the civil war raged with renewed intensity, Portugal remained aloof from intervention efforts in London, again refusing to join 26 nations in a plan to stop foreign help from reaching Spain.

In France, however, President Albert Lebrun signed a decree prohibiting Frenchmen from joining either side in the war. The general ban on foreign volunteers to Spain is effective Saturday midnight.

HEAVY CASUALTIES

Severe fighting was concentrated in the siege of Madrid as the conflict entered its eighth month. Insurgents reported they had crushed a mass onslaught of government forces on La Marranosa Chemical Factory settlement in the bullet-swept Jarama river sector. Heavy casualties were reported among the government troops, led personally by General Jose Miaja, head of the unified government Madrid front command.

Ten persons were reported killed and more than 70 wounded in the Vallecas district of Madrid alone, as insurgent planes three times swooped down out of a moonlit sky.

In the Jarama river sector, 17 foreign volunteers in the government cause were reported dead when trucks in which they were riding drove directly into insurgent lines.

WOMAN SPY EXECUTED

Insurgents were reported to have executed a woman member of a spy ring, with headquarters, they said, at Grinon, 18 miles southwest of Madrid. Activities of the operatives were held partly responsible for General Franco's failure to smash Madrid's defenses.

At Valencia, Dr. Norman Bethune described the "terrible evacuation" of Malaga by 150,000 persons who clogged the single road out. He told of picking up dead children from the pavement.

General Quiepo de Llano of the insurgents charged the government staged the bombing of two British destroyers last week to make it appear insurgents were guilty.

In scattered bombing operations, insurgent planes dropped bombs on cities, Spain, near Perthus on the Franco-Spanish border, and on power stations in Lerida province.

Jailed After Wild Chase for Hearse

Leland P. Hills, 21, of Main street, Hopkinton, was given three months in the House of Correction and fined $25 in Woburn district court today in connection with a three-mile chase after a hearse.

The youth, a spare driver for a Reading funeral director, pleaded guilty to taking the hearse after wrecking a sedan belonging to the same owner.

The wild ride, according to police, started in Melrose and continued to Stoneham, ending in Reading.

Chamberlain Next Premier

Edward's Return To Throne Hinted

By KINGSBURY SMITH

Copyright, 1937, by International News Service

London, Feb. 18—A move by the conservative party to make Neville Chamberlain successor to Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin on a "big navy" policy for restoration of the might of the British empire in world affairs was seen today behind Chamberlain's presentation of Britain's greatest peace-time armament program.

Duke of Windsor

Neville Chamberlain

Baldwin's retirement shortly after King George's coronation in May is now generally taken for granted. That Chamberlain, tall, thin chancellor of the exchequer is set to succeed him is likewise generally accepted.

These developments immediately aroused keenest speculation regarding Chamberlain's attitude towards former King Edward.

The prospective premiership of Neville Chamberlain is known to hold the friendliest of feelings towards the Duke of Windsor, and to have the highest respect for the Duke's strong will and determination.

Edward's Recall

Should King George's health fail him in later years, so that he would be unable to carry on his kingly duties, it is considered not inconceivable that Chamberlain might recall Edward to the throne of a re-armed and mighty England, in the belief that the strong and popular Edward, at the head of a powerfully armed Britain, would fully restore the empire's prestige throughout the world.

The fact that Baldwin arranged for Chamberlain to preside in the empire and the world the $7,500,000,000 armament program indicates that the way is being paved for the chancellor's elevation to the premiership, where he will direct the spending of the vast sum.

Some quarters view Chamberlain's prospective premiership as a clever political move to perpetuate the Conservatives' existing control of governmental affairs and to prevent any serious threat by Laborite or Liberal opposition to against continuation of the so-called "national" (coalition) government.

With the sun of the famed British imperialist, Joseph Chamberlain, heading the government, and with the semblance of a National government being maintained by the inclusion of one or two Laborite and Liberal cabinet members, the nation could be warned against the danger of upsetting the government while the emergence rearmament program is under way.

In line with this school of thought, there are already reports that Chamberlain has decided to bring Winston Churchill, Britain's "strong arm" statesman, into the cabinet as minister of coordination of defense.

Churchill, descendant of the great Lord Marlborough, held, at different times, all three of the defense ministerial posts in World War. The present minister for coordination of defense is especially created post, is Sir Thomas Inskip.

Sir Thomas will be called upon today to defend the arms program in the House of Commons, after two opposition members speak. Baldwin will wind up the two-day debate for the government, after which there will be a vote of confidence on which the government will stand or fall.

Wally Gives Royal Family Emeralds Edward Gave Her

London, Feb. 18 (UP)—Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson has returned to the royal family the priceless "Queen Alexandra emeralds" which former King Edward gave her, the weekly newsmagazine Cavalcade stated today.

The jewels, the publication said, are now in possession of Queen Elizabeth, and some may be inserted in a crown being prepared for her, Cavalcade said.

Mrs. Simpson, according to Cavalcade, had insured the jewels along with her own for 1500,000.

Referring to the late Queen Alexandra's jewels, the magazine declared:

"The emeralds from this valuable collection were given with other family jewels to Mrs. Simpson by Edward VIII when he was King.

"When, however, Edward decided to abdicate, Theodore Goddard, Mrs. Simpson's attorney, was suddenly sent on a secret mission to Cannes. In a long conference with Mrs. Simpson he talked about the future, and he is credited with having been instructed to ask her about the jewels which Edward had given her from the family collection as gifts to one who was to join the family.

"Goddard asked her if she would be so good as to return them.

"Mrs. Simpson handed the family heirlooms which she had insured, together with her own jewels, for 100,000 pounds sterling. One of the royal stones was so valuable no one would insure it."

ARMED FORCES IN U. S. BELOW STANDARDS

"To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace."—George Washington.

This excerpt from an address delivered on January 1, 1790, to the Continental Congress by the Father of our country, exemplifies the spirit of National Defense Week now being observed throughout the land.

George Washington was an astute general, a valiant leader of men and a master diplomat, fully aware of the intrigue of foreign powers. His words come from a mind educated by the horrors of war, the tragedy of unpreparedness.

In a letter to Elbridge Gerry, in the year 1810, Washington wrote briefly, but wisely:

"In peace prepare for war."

STEP BY STEP

Step by step, in a practical way, the National Defense Act of 1920 provided for meeting the requirements of defensive war. This act is a whole some building but adequate support by the people of this country to make its purpose completely successful.

The fulfillment of the provisions of the act can only be seriously jeopardized by lack of financial support.

Actual reports issued by the army intelligence, show that our armed forces are far below the standard for units of other great powers.

N. E. ARMY FORCES

Contrary to the general belief, the United States army forces in New England are not large. Their number, in fact, approximately 400 commissioned officers and 5000 enlisted men. It is forty per cent less times the size of the Boston police department.

In spite the U. S. Army in New England is distributed as follows:

Massachusetts	3553
Maine	1250
New Hampshire	12
Vermont	1038
Rhode Island	432
Connecticut	580

Within the First Corps area, which controls the military posts throughout New England, there are 28 army posts. Most of them are used as recruiting basis. Inadequately manned for any emergency.

R. O. T. C. SUPPLEMENT

In the event of war, or a national calamity, the army is by far the first source of call. The R. O. T. C. supplements the army, and the next is the Citizen's Military Training Corps.

Military strategists decry our lack of trained officers. The people of this country should support National Defense Week they say, by using posts throughout New England fitting services have been held in observance.

On Washington's Birthday National Defense Week comes to a close. Colorful ceremonies have been planned at Fort Devens by the commandant.

Police Hearing

Five bills, all calling for legislation to transfer authority to appoint the Boston police commissioner from the governor to the mayor, were to be considered at a public hearing at the State House today.

Banker's Widow, 2 Children Perish

Detroit, Feb. 18 (UNS)—Mrs. Constance Hayes, widow of a former Detroit banker, and two of her four children burned to death today when fire swept their home in Grosse Pointe, exclusive Detroit suburb.

Two children and two servants escaped.

Victims were Mrs. Hayes and two children, Constance, eight, and Setholield, nine.

Girl on 3d Week Of Sneezing Spell

Crossville, Tenn., Feb. 18 (AP)—Ten-year-old Bertha Turner showed slight improvement today, but she still is in the throes of a "sneezing sickness" that came upon her three weeks ago.

Dr. E. W. Mitchell said her family told him "she sneezes as many as 200 times in succession and apparently on some days, sneezes about half the time."

Chained to Red Cause in Spain!

A graphic story of the horror of Spain's civil war is told in this picture. This soldier "volunteered" to fight for the Communist-Socialists. He was thereupon chained to a machine-gun post on the Ternel front (see arrow). Escape for him was impossible—only death could be his reward. So here lies his mutilated body securely chained to the post, after Insurgent forces had mowed him down. Another "volunteer" took his place. And so the camera records the atrocities in that war-torn land.

2 FISHING TRAWLERS BACK AFTER WILD TRIP

Battered by tremendous seas, lifeboats smashed in their davits, and the iron guard rails about their pilot houses twisted, two fishing steam trawlers, the Ripple and Newton limped into dock at Fish Pier today.

Captain Angus Briland, of the trawler Ripple said he had never encountered such seas in his years on the Atlantic. He added:

"We were 200 miles east of Boston at 2 a.m., Wednesday bound for Boston from the Grand Banks. Three gigantic waves struck us. Three lifeboats were torn from their davits. One went overboard. The planking was riped from the deck and the boat virtually stood on her beam end.

"All of us thought we were goners but the backwash from the last wave righted us in the nick of time."

Captain George Oddson, of the Newton, who was forced to cling for life to the windowsill of his pilot house to prevent being washed overboard 100 miles off Massachusetts Bay, had this to say:

"We left Boston Monday bound for the Banks. We were 166 miles due east when we ran into a howling northeast gale and high seas. One wave swept over the trawler, smashed every window in the pilot house, flooded our holds, and nearly hurled me through the window.

"I had to hold on for all I was worth. With two lifeboats gone and our steering gear affected, we put back to port. It's the worst Atlantic I've ever faced."

Peggy Sobs of Rubinoff Tryst

ASKS $500,000 BALM

'He Jilted Me,' She Tells Jury

New York, Feb. 18 (INS)—Peggy Garcia wept copiously in Supreme Court today as she admitted that Dave Rubinoff jilted her and greeted her announcement that she expected a child with these words:

"Excuse me, I'm busy right now."

Peggy, who is suing the radio violinist for $500,000, alleging breach of promise, also testified she had difficulty in handing to her husband, whom she married after Rubinoff allegedly jilted her, the $5 bill he gave her.

"He found out about Dave, and he gave me a terrific sock that laid me out cold," she confided to the jury.

When the trial was resumed today Rubinoff made his third appearance. He was accompanied by his three brothers, Charles, Herman and Phil.

Questioned by her attorney, Bernhard H. Shaffer, Peggy said that after Rubinoff allegedly jilted her in a Philadelphia hotel she returned to New York and waited nearly a week before Rubinoff again called her.

"He asked me to come to his apartment," she said. "I went right over. He was alone."

Tells of Love

Q—Tell us everything that happened. A—Well, he met me at the elevator. He held out his arms. I rushed into them and he kissed me again and again. I was terribly happy. I had been terrified at being separated from him.

Q—How did he act? A—When I told him I had married he said, "My little darling, it is so foolish of you to worry about us love for you." Then he kissed me and made love to me.

She telephoned him the next day, but was told that he was out.

"I telephoned many times after that," Miss Garcia said, taking out her handkerchief. "The operator in his apartment house got to asking who I was. Then she'd call Dave's apartment, and tell me that he was out."

Q—Did you try to see him? A—Yes, I went over to his apartment house, but the employes who had always let me in, stopped me.

Q—Did you finally contact him? A—I got him on the phone. He said, "I'm too busy to see you," I said, "That's a different tune you're singing now." I asked him to come and see me. He said, "No, I'm too busy now. Bye."

He never did go to see her after that, she said. After once being a girl friend who greeted her with:

"Say, I saw your boy friend, Rubinoff, walking up 7th avenue with another girl."

"Then," Miss Garcia told the jury, "I gave up."

Q—Did you try again to get in touch with Rubinoff? A—Yes, I went to his apartment house. I saw him coming out. I ran up to him. He said, "I've got it; I'm too busy to talk to you."

Q—Did you tell him about your condition? A—Yes. He sort of smiled and said, "Oh, forget it. If you need any money let me know. Right now, excuse me, I'm in a hurry."

"And that," said Miss Garcia, bowing her head, "was the last time I saw him."

In August, 1935, she consulted an attorney and it was decided to file suit in February, 1936. The suit was not filed, she said, because Dave became ill and leaving me out of his home.

Under cross-examination, she was at first surprised when he refused and said he had lost his temper.

"He told me," she said, "that after all he did love me."

Pleads for Mate

Q—Who did you pick Garcia for a name? A—I thought I could get a job as a Spanish dancer. I knew there was a figure named Garcia and it sounded Spanish. So I took it.

But she didn't get a job.

About a year ago she met a boy friend, Charles Kaufman, and they were married last September.

Attorney for Rubinoff demanded her husband's name. Miss Garcia pleaded with the judge.

"Please, can't his name be kept out? He is in business here in New York and I have caused him enough humiliation."

Rubinoff's counsel objected.

"We want that name. The man she says she married is already married and has two children."

"I must say," remarked Miss Garcia, "that's news to me."

The court ruled she did not have to give her husband's name.

One day Miss Garcia went on her husband heard from a friend of her affair with Rubinoff.

He called me all kinds of names," she testified.

Q—Did he abuse you physically? A—Well, he took a terrific sock at me and blacked my eye. He went out, leaving me out cold on the floor.

Earlier Dave correspondence was put in evidence when he refused to see her and said he had lost his temper.

"He told me," she said, "that after all he did love me."

THORPE Shocked by BRIDAL

HAD HEARD OF MARY'S GROOM

(Copyright, 1937, by International News Service)

Hollywood, Feb. 18—Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, former husband of Mary Astor, was one of the most surprised men in Hollywood today when informed by International News Service that the noted film star had married again.

She and Manuel M. Del Campo, Mexico City, have just wedded.

"Well, I declare," remarked the surgeon, whose court fight to retain custody of six-year-old Marylyn Thorpe ended last summer when he agreed to a compromise.

"Will Miss Astor's marriage change the status of Marylyn?" Dr. Thorpe was asked.

"Frankly I don't know," was the reply. "I'm a bit overwhelmed. You see, I had met Del Campo recently when I called at Miss Astor's home to take Marylyn for a ride.

"Naturally, one hears rumors, but there are so many rumors about persons seen together once or twice that I paid no attention to them."

"I heard recently that Miss Astor might marry Del Campo. But I had heard the same thing said about so many persons that I paid no further attention to it."

Mary Astor Bridegroom On Way to Dad's Burial

Mexico City, Feb. 18 (INS)—Manuel Martinez Del Campo, who eloped today with Mary Astor, is a member of one of the most distinguished families of Mexico.

Of Spanish, Irish and Italian descent, Del Campo was educated in England, attending a public school at Clifton. He is 24 and, having played in several minor stage roles, was seeking a Hollywood career when he met Miss Astor.

His father was secretary of the Mexican-American conference at Niagara in 1914, and has held diplomatic posts in England, France and Spain. He died Tuesday, and young Del Campo is en route here to attend the funeral, it is understood.

Del Campo's mother, who was Dona Mercedes Cuevas, died three years ago. She was a noted horsewoman.

Young Martinez Del Campo also is connected with the Escandon, one of Mexico's richest and most socially prominent families.

'Breakfast-for-2' Maid Silent on Astor Bridal

Hollywood, Feb. 18 (INS)—Nellie Richardson, nursemaid at the palatial Toluca Lake home of Mary Astor, refused to discuss the elopement of the film actress today.

Asked whether little Marylyn Thorpe, storm center of the custody fight between Miss Astor and Dr. Thorpe, her former husband, might be taken to Mexico City for a visit during the honeymoon of the actress and Manuel M. Del Campo, Miss Richardson, or she whose voice resembled that of the former London woman, hanged the receiver onto its hook.

A variety of rumors were flying about Hollywood today in the wake of the sensational elopement, among them one that little Marylyn had accompanied her mother to Yuma.

Miss Richardson reached the limelight when she testified at the "diary" trial that she had taken "breakfast for two" to Dr. Thorpe's bedroom and there seen a "beautiful blond" on one occasion and brunettes and auburn-haired women at other times in various stages of dishabille.

Dr. Thorpe emphatically denied being in a compromising position at any time while he had full custody of Marylyn following the divorce.

$1,000,000 Flood Bill Passes House

Washington, Feb. 18 (INS)—The House passed today and sent to the Senate a resolution authorizing the President to allocate approximately $1,000,000 in relief funds to the U. S. Public Health Service for use in flood-devastated areas.

Yuma Gets to Be Habit With Mary

Hollywood, Feb. 18—The parallel between his own long-dead romance with auburn-haired Mary as to her new one with the Mexican was not mentioned by Dr. Franklin Thorp today. The doctor eloped to the same Arizona city with the actress June 29, 1931.

Earlier the same month, Dr. Thorpe and Miss Astor went to Yuma for the purpose of getting married but he changed his mind at the last minute, according to revelations at the custody trial, and decided to "think it over a little longer."

Diary Impounded

During the trial attorneys for Dr. Thorpe said they were prepared to introduce a sensationally frank diary of Miss Astor.

They said it confided of her association with prominent men, including George Kaufman, the playwright.

The diary's contents were not introduced in evidence when the case ended in compromise and the court impounded it.

Kaufman, asked for comment, said in the East that "I don't keep a diary."

Miss Astor's first husband, Kenneth Hawks, cinema director, was killed in an airplane collision over the Pacific ocean in 1930. A year later she married Dr. Thorpe. The nuptials took place at Yuma and were kept secret for some time during litigation over Hawks estate.

The Thorpes were divorced in 1935.

After Miss Astor, in a swift court move, accused Dr. Thorpe of having married her without divorcing a previous wife, the physician replied by secretly quoting from the diary to prove his charge of "gross immoral conduct."

In a superior court petition to regain custody of Marylyn, Dr. Thorpe stated Miss Astor wrote:

Told of Diary

"Maybe Marylyn some day would like to know what sort of a person her mother was and maybe she will be consoled when she makes mistakes and gets in jams to know that her mother was a champion at making mistakes. I blush a little (very little) at the idea of her reading some of the stuff in this book. I have been and am such a fool."

In an affidavit filed Jan. 29, 1936, Dr. Thorpe said Miss Astor once wrote:

"I love George and the least I can do is to save him from a messy scandal."

The physician asserted she was in love with "George" three months before her divorce.

On the witness stand Miss Astor tearfully testified Dr. Thorpe shook Marylyn so hard her locks rattled.

At 14, Miss Astor was taken by her mother from Chicago to New York, where Charles Alson, photographer, pronounced her one of the most beautiful girls he ever had seen.

Immediately she was signed up for two-reelers. In 1925 her star definitely was on the ascendancy as the leading lady to Douglas Fairbanks in "Don Q, Son of Zorro."

In 1926, she broke off an engagement to Irving Asher, studio executive. She explained their love had failed to withstand the test of her long absence on "location" in Spain.

The death of her first husband plunged her abruptly into a period of sorrow. Hawks was one of the most promising young directors of the Pacific Coast, and Pickford, Chaplin, Fairbanks Jr. "Doc Q." Ross, officials of Tiffany Studios, Lasky and Zukor, all were his friends.

THIRD TRIP TO ALTAR

Hollywood, Feb. 18—Mary Astor, film actress who today married Manuel Del Campo, Mexico City insurance salesman, after a secret place elopement to Yuma, was the central figure in the widely publicized "love diary" court case.

The red-haired actress, once widowed and once divorced, identified herself in a county license clerk as Lucille L. Thorpe. She was born Lucile Langhanke at Quincy, Ill., May 3, 1906.

The slender film star last year waged a bitter court battle with Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, her divorced husband, over custody of their five-year-old daughter, Marylyn.

The diary's contents were not introduced in evidence when the case ended in compromise and the court impounded it.

Kaufman, asked for comment, said in the East that "I don't keep a diary."

YOUTH SHOT DEAD IN SO. END MYSTERY

inair gloves, to harmonizing neckties to his attire, even to his underwear. He didn't have a penny on his person, though, or a key. Only two torn tags of a downtown open-air auto parking space concern.

The State-street night lieutenant, John Gorham, found out after checking the six parking spaces of the company whose name they bore. The tags showed that a car had been parked last Friday, again on Tuesday, but whatever car it was, it was gone.

BULLET IN BRAIN

When police got the young man to Boston City Hospital, doctors said he was dead. That he could have lived only a few minutes after the bullet—no bullets penetrated his brain.

They found a half of a passage of "Paul Jones" typewritten in a note.

Then they found that someone had seen the youth leave a South End night club not long before the police alarm was pulled. His walk to death was about 300 yards, police estimated.

Patrolman Herbert Dolan, who was one of those at the scene, went to the police bureau of Division 4 headquarters.

"He was about 20 to 25 years of age. Five feet, eight inches tall. Weight 150. Bluish green eyes and sandy hair."

CLOTHES MARKS CLUE

"Wore a dark blue checked suit of good make, but no manufacturer's marks. A white shirt with red dots and a blue and white polka-dot bow necktie.

"Had a field brown tweed topcoat. Had black shoes and socks. Blue and white checked underwear.

"'Tailors' or cleaners' marks sewed on a trouser pocket showed: '1—100158—L. Thor,' and '39122758—L. Tailor.'"

Suicide or murder? Who sounded the fatal gunshot alarm at the police line?

Police couldn't tell.

Rather, Martin of Eliot Boston watchman at the seven-story building on the wharf where the youth was found dead, even heard a shattering shots. He just heard a sound.

That the youth toppled to a different direction he would have plunged into the channel. If he were slain, police thought, he would have been pushed into the water.

But the photo that apparently killed him had been used a lot, police bulletin reports discovered.

And it had no fingerprints on it.

Police took impressions of the fingerprints on the two match cards that bore the scribbled words "I killed myself," and they took fingerprints from the entire body. Then they took the dead man's fingerprints.

But the fingerprints were not on record in Boston, despite one man's theory. So police broadcast the formula to the Department of Justice at Washington and to police in all other principal cities.

AS I SEE IT

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

Dr. Frank Apperly, professor of pathology at the medical college of Virginia, proposes an American counterpart of the French Legion of Honor, and Britain's New Year's awards of the King.

These marks of distinction are supposed to go to citizens who have achieved something that redounds to the glory of their countries or to the arts, and sciences and philanthropy.

Damon Runyon

In Britain, for example, a man who has managed to make his brand of whiskey, or ale, or soap, or tea, or ladies' girdles, better known than any other through the adroit and extensive advertising, is not infrequently honored by his country with a title.

Sometimes they bestow the accolade on an actor. Usually this happens so late in the actor's career, that there is a suspicion abroad in the land that the country is grateful because soon the actor will no longer be able to act.

They have no titles to award in France, so the gift in that country for presumed merit is membership in the Legion of Honor. A bit of red ribbon to wear in the lapel buttonhole goes with it.

This ribbon was once quite useful in France in impressing head waiters. We are told that of late years it has lost some weight in that respect, because most of the head waiters are wearing the red ribbons themselves.

Merit Awards

If they got it for being good head waiters, we claim this is a truly merited award. We are in favor of honoring good head waiters the world over. They are scarce enough, Heaven knows.

We are acquainted with a number of newspapermen who were war correspondents in France during the late unpleasantness and who own the red ribbon of the Legion of Honor. They frankly admit that they got it for knowing the right people.

We know another chap who owns the ribbon, but never wears it. It seems he is a trifle self conscious about it. At the time some big floods were afoot in Paris years ago, he ferried a few citizens to dry land.

He says it was no bother to him and no danger. Therefore he was much surprised when the French came around and tied the ribbon on him. He removed it as soon as the donors departed, and has never worn it since.

He says this is because he is not right sure why they gave it to him. He remembered that he had rather a dubious reputation in Paris at the time, and he says he has always had a vague impression that they may have decorated him for "not" robbing the dead.

Many Decorations

Dr. Apperly may not know it, but we already have a number of awards of distinction in this country, most of them military, and most of them for gallantry.

The greatest non-military award is the Carnegie medal for life saving. It is also the most sensible, because not only honor, but an honorarium goes with it. The Carnegie medal carries some useful cash.

Our nearest approach to the Legion of Honor would be the distinguished service medal, which came on with the distinguished service cross, during the war. The distinguished service cross is for bravery on the field of action.

The distinguished service medal was awarded a lot of generals during the war, including many who never left the U. S. A., thus giving rise to the impression that their distinguished service was not annoying the boys in combat.

The D. S. M. also went to various civilians for their superior craft in hiding behind desks during the war. The D. S. M. is the handiest decoration ever invented by this government. It can be awarded to anybody—and was.

The distinguished service cross is distinctly a decoration, for valor, not many own it that do not deserve it. True, it was somewhat surprising to find Congress occasionally making it retroactive, and awarding it to some fellow with a political yank for a deed performed in the Spanish-American War, but in the main the D. S. C. fell into the proper hands.

You may be reasonably sure that the fellows entitled to wear it did something during the war to deserve it. The D. S. C. was not issued with the rations. That was the French Croix de Guerre.

Top Distinction

The highest distinction in the way of an award that this country can bestow upon a citizen is the congressional gold medal of honor.

This medal is awarded only for gallantry "in the line of duty, and beyond," as we recall the wording. That "and beyond" carries a morbid meaning. The men who are gallant beyond the line of duty usually wind up dead. Those who manage to live to personally receive the congressional medal do so by the narrowest of squeaks.

Often it is a posthumous reward. It goes to the heroes' widows and children. Before the big war there were not many living owners of the Congressional Medal. The list is not lengthy now. We once saw a dinner at American army headquarters in France to a number of soldiers who had been awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, and high generals were proud to wait upon the men.

Our grateful republic puts 14-karat gold into the Congressional Medal of Honor, which is apt to represent a deed of superb heroism that saved a desperate situation.

But nothing else goes with it, except a starred blue ribbon with which the hero can hang the medal to his chest.

No pension. No cash award, such as old Andy Carnegie provided for the heroes of civil life. The owner of the most priceless decoration in the United States goes his way with his medal no better off than before he became a hero, except that he has an heirloom for his children to display to their children, with the explanation:

"Your grandpop got that for being a very brave man."

"How nice," the grandchildren will remark, "and what became of grandpop?"

"Well," the explanation is apt to continue, "he starved to death."

ROOSEVELT IN PLEA FOR CROP INSURANCE

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Feb. 18—President Roosevelt today asked Congress to enact one of his campaign promises into law—the institution of a system of crop insurance to store surpluses of agricultural products in bumper years which may be drawn upon in lean years.

And, significantly, in view of his judicial reform fight, Mr. Roosevelt concluded his brief message with this pointed observation:

"May I repeat what I have suggested in a former message: That because economic and social reforms of this character are essentially national in scope and in administration, the citizens of our nation believe that our form of government was never intended to prohibit their accomplishment."

BARBED THRUST SEEN

Legislators now scurrying over the President's court proposals were quick to snap this as a somewhat barbed thrust at the Supreme Court which, in outlawing the AAA program, declared Administration bid down the doctrine that agriculture, like mining and manufacturing, is "essentially local" in character.

With that, Mr. Roosevelt made it plain he does not agree. Instead of being "essentially local" in character, which was the language of the court, Mr. Roosevelt emphasized that in his belief agriculture is "essentially national" in scope and in administration. The plea on words was not lost on members of Congress.

WHEAT TEST URGED

The President proposed that the principle of crop insurance be tried out first on wheat, which is the nation's greatest crop. He suggested that the crop of 1938 might afford the first test.

Later, the scheme could be adapted to other crops when it is established that producers desire them—and application of the plan to wheat has provided a backlog of experience in applying the principles of crop insurance."

With his message to Congress, the President transmitted a lengthy report from the special committee which he appointed last summer to study the proposal.

Both Mr. Roosevelt and his Republican rival, Governor Alfred M. Landon, endorsed crop insurance during the campaign. The President's appointment of the committee followed quickly upon a speech by Governor Landon in which he committed himself to the principle of the plan. But bi-partisan endorsement little difficulty is expected to be encountered in moving the measure through Congress.

What the Supreme Court may say about it later on, if it is challenged, is something else again. But evidently the President had this contingency in mind when he wrote the concluding paragraph to his message.

PROTECTS SURPLUS

"Crop insurance and a system of storage reserve," said the President's message, "should operate so that surpluses in years of good weather might be carried over for use in years of unfavorable growing conditions.

"Crop insurance and a system of storage reserve would help to protect the income of individual farmers against the hazards of crop failure; it would help to protect consumers against shortages of food supplies and against extremes of prices; and, finally, it would assist in providing a more nearly even flow of farm supplies, thus stabilizing farm buying power and contributing to the security of business and employment.

"The government also has a special interest in measures which would assist in guarding farmers and consumers against emergencies arising out of extremes of surpluses or shortages.

"The expense in the past to Federal, state and local governments arising by reason of crop losses points to the desirability of employing the principle of insurance in order to lessen the cost—financial and human—of future crop disasters."

Celebrating their ninth birthday today, the Walsh triplets, Laura, Frances and Archie, Jr., visited the Boston Evening American where they indulged in a bit of reading.

The triplets, children of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Walsh of Glenhill road, Mattapan, took the opportunity to read the Boston American Book-A-Week Classics and visit the various departments of the plant.

After they had been shown about the building the triplets, in company of their mother, went to a nearby bowling alley to practice their bowling.

Their father, former New England bowling champion, is teaching the children the fine points of the game and it perhaps won't be long before Archie will be trouncing his father.

LOVE WRECKS EASIEST IN FIRST 10 YEARS

The first 10 years of married life are the hardest according to statistics on divorces released today by James F. Reynolds, register of probate of Norfolk county.

During the year 305 decrees of divorce were granted and in this group 159 couples had been married less than 10 years when suit was filed. The first five years are also quite perilous, according to the reports. In that time 63 wives or husbands—one-fifth of the number of decrees granted—looked for their freedom.

A total of 412 divorce suits were filed during the year, a noticeable increase over the 358 filed in 1935. In 1935, 299 divorces were granted by the court.

The uncertainty of married life was shown by the fact that of the couples who separated their existence together lasted from a mere four months to a lengthy 41 years and five months. Eleven wives or husbands filed suits for divorce before the expiration of a year of "bliss," it was disclosed. Twenty couples who had been married for over 30 years were separated by divorce.

Women proved to be the moving factors in suits for divorce. Of the 305 writs granted, 229 were given to women and 74 to men.

U.S. Senator Gerald P. Nye says:

"I enjoy the comfort a light smoke gives my throat"

"I have smoked Luckies off and on ever since my first term in the Senate 11 years ago, and I have always enjoyed their taste and the feeling of comfort and safety a light smoke gives my throat. I have done a great deal of public speaking, on the floor of the Senate, over the radio and at conferences. Necessarily this results in a strain on the voice. So naturally, in smoking, I have to think of my throat—and I have found that a light smoke is suitable to my throat."

U.S. SENATOR FROM NORTH DAKOTA

In a recent independent survey, an overwhelming majority of lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc., who said they smoked cigarettes, expressed their personal preference for a light smoke.

Senator Nye's statement verifies the wisdom of this preference and so do leading artists of radio, stage, screen and opera, whose voices are their fortunes, and who choose Luckies, a light smoke. 49 AXE VICTIMS PLANNING PLEA TO CURLEY

Axe-swinging by state department heads was still brisk in progress today, with notices of dismissal already in the hands of 49 job holders appointed without civil service ratings.

Tales of woe from many of his one-time proteges sounded the ears of former Governor Curley as he came home with his bride after an extended honeymoon in the West Indies, Florida and Washington.

Curley appointees figured largely among the half hundred public welfare department and public utility department workers notified that their names were due to be dropped from state payrolls.

Governor Hurley said he did not directly order the dismissals and had no personal knowledge of them.

BEACON HILL "NERVOUS"

He made no secret, however, of the fact that the axe-swinging was in consequence of his announced campaign against persons holding jobs not fairly won by civil service qualifications.

With more shadows in state department personnel in immediate prospect, Beacon Hill was a nervous place today.

Casualties thus far totalled 25 in the department of public utilities and 22 in the public welfare department.

The former group of dismissed workers will be out of jobs, as of March 1.

WELFARE AIDES OUSTED

The welfare department axe victims will be off the payroll February 28.

Four former members of the office staff of ex-Governor Curley found their names on the "fired" list today.

Others dropped included a number of strong political supporters of former Governor Curley.

Several of them, he appointed during the last days of his regime to the jobs they are now losing.

DROVE 12 YEARS DESPITE BAN

Twelve years ago his license to drive a car was suspended, and never restored, but John Anativo, 20, of Columbus avenue, Newton Upper Falls, has continued to drive, he admitted today in Newton court.

Anativo was arraigned on charges of operating after his right had been suspended and registering a car under the false name of John Nunzo.

On each count, after he had pleaded guilty, he was sentenced to three months in the House of Correction, the sentence to be served concurrently.

It was brought out in court that Anativo has a long police court and jail record on charges from hen stealing to automobile thefts

Wife Willed $7500 Campbell Estate

Intentionally omitting any bequests to his two children, Superintendent of Schools Patrick T. Campbell, who died February 12, left his entire estate of $7500 to his widow, Mrs. Edith T. Campbell, according to his will filed in Suffolk probate court today.

The educator referred to his son and daughter by stating in the will:

"To my son, Thomas, and my daughter, Edith, I leave nothing. I have intentionally omitted any bequest to each of my children for reasons satisfactory to myself."

Thomas Campbell is a teacher-coach at Memorial High school in Roxbury while Miss Edith is a substitute teacher in the Boston schools.

Utah O. K.'s Reform

Salt Lake City, Utah, Feb. 18 (AP)—Shattering a minority opposition group under a 90 to 7 vote, Utah's Legislature passed a bill approving President Roosevelt's court reorganization plan. It was then sent to the Senate, where approval was expected.

APE WOULDN'T SWAP BODIES WITH MAN

A contented husband, unless he resorts to homicide, has small chance of living longer than his wife, according to Dr. Ernest A. Hooton, distinguished Harvard anthropologist.

Average life span of the American male approximates that of the female, with an average female life span of 60 years, Dr. Hooton said.

He asserted that man isn't making the most of his physical or his social opportunities as a supposedly superior offshoot of the monkey family.

"A self-respecting ape," Dr. Hooton said, "wouldn't swap bodies with the typical human city dweller.

"And mentally, man is selling his biological birthright for a mess of mirrors. He is peopling his world with the immature and the senile and is allowing their dictates to overrule those of the intellectually vigorous."

Sift Note Threats

Norwalk, Ct., Feb. 18.—Extortion notes received here by Mrs. Marion Osen, of Maine avenue, daughter of the late Thomas A. Edison, were under investigation by police today. Letters threatened the kidnaping of the children of Mrs. Osen's brother at Orange, N. J.

BACKERS QUIT CHILD LABOR HEARING

demand a fair hearing on the child labor amendment.

Among those in the picket line were:

Kenneth J. Taylor, legislative agent of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor; Philip Knisner, representing the Needle Workers' Union; Mrs. La Rue Brown of Cambridge; Mrs. Arthur G. Hatch, wife of the former Works Progress Administration head; Miss Mary Alice Hoad of Brookline; Miss Margaret Welsman, who said she represented the Consumers League; Miss Dora Norwood, who said she was of the Woman's Trade Union, and Mrs. William Hoag, chairman for registered for Parent-Teachers Association of Boston.

Originally there were approximately 50 pickets in line, marching along the Beacon street sidewalk, with a crowd of curious gathering on the Boston Common side of the street.

Others began to follow into line shortly afterward, however, some of these including Mrs. Roland M. Hinkle, wife of the Tufts College instructor; George A. Bowen of Washington, D. C., general vice-president of the International Association of Machinists; Mrs. Robert J. Watt, wife of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Earl G. Latham, Mrs. Kenneth I. Taylor and Mrs. Josephine Begonis.

When word of the turmoil and the picketing reached Radcliffe, five Harvard Law School and two Radcliffe College students hastened to the State House and joined the picket line.

WHEELER'S SON THERE

The two Radcliffe girls refused to give their names, but the leader of the Harvard group said he was Edward K. Wheeler, son of United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana.

The others identified themselves as Sid Zagri and Robert Mellinkoff, both of California, W. L. Minnick of Washington and Jackson Stoeckle of Wisconsin.

They had hardly taken their places when a youth arrived with five signs all with the words:

"Pass the child labor amendment."

The signs were distributed and carried in the picket line.

Detailed to the picket scene but remaining passive were Police Sergeant William H. McKenzie and five patrolmen from Mills street station. They had a "wagon" standing near parked opposite the State House.

SIXTY IN LINE

The hearing explosion came after Alfred Baker Lewis, secretary of the Socialist Party in Massachusetts and Senate candidate to date for governor, had spoken briefly before the legislative committee on constitutional law in favor of Massachusetts ratification of the child labor amendment.

When Lewis had concluded, Taylor, spokesman for the proponents, got up to introduce another speaker. It was then he was interrupted by Senator John D. Mackay of Quincy, Senate chairman of the committee.

Mackay announced that only two hours would be given today and that the committee had decided to give opponents the first hour and proponents the last. There would be no afternoon session, he said, because of other business.

TAYLOR PROTESTS

Taylor began in protest, but was cut short by Senator Mackay, who said:

"You had your opportunity to speak yesterday."

Taylor continued to protest what he characterized as "irregularities," and was ordered to sit down. When he disregarded the order and kept on speaking, Chairman Mackay called for State House guards.

Women on the Child Labor Picket Front

Smiling and carrying banners bearing the words "Pass the Child Labor Amendment," these fair pickets are shown as they marched in front of the State House today, after the child labor hearing came near ending in a complete walk-out. In the group, left to right, are Mrs. Robert J. Watt, Mrs. Earl G. Latham, Mrs. Kenneth I. Taylor and Mrs. Josephine Begonis.

Boos and catcalls began to sound. Kramer, Mrs. Rose Norwood of the Woman's Trade Union League and Joseph Salerno of the Amalgamated Garment Workers of America jumped up and took places beside Taylor, who was haranguing in front of the rostrum.

WILD DISORDER

Others jumped from their seats, and the hearing room was in wild disorder as the State House guards assigned themselves to the crowd.

Taylor paused on his brief case and stated:

"We withdraw from this hearing, under protest."

Someone else cried:

"All labor people and those in favor of the amendment, walk out."

Nearly two-thirds of those in the audience crowded for the door and filled the corridor outside with whistles, jeers and catcalls.

While the crowd was being cautioned by Mackay, with Representative McCarthy still absent, Representative Lewis of the sporting fans then was what was going on outside, and others in the audience began to crowd out.

TAYLOR'S PROTEST

Before beginning picketing, Taylor stated to reporters:

"This hearing is grossly irregular. The chairman of the committee is evidently anti-union. It became necessary for organized labor and its representatives to withdraw from the hearing.

"Seldom, if ever, has such an irregularity occurred at a public hearing. We resent the unfair attitude of Senator Mackay, who was evidently prejudiced from the start."

Senator Mackay also issued a statement in which he said:

"I had a disagreeable duty to perform and I did it to the best of my ability. I simply had to divide the time and I did. I am sure that public opinion will sustain me."

Several opponents of the amendment were heard after the proponents had staged their walk-out. Then the hearing was continued until tomorrow.

COUGHLIN HITS COURT 'PLOT'

Chicago, Feb. 18 (AP)—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, in a signed article published today in his weekly review "Social Justice," charged President Roosevelt advocated altering the Supreme Court because "he wants to be a dictator."

"The whole Supreme Court issue," the article said, "is an issue between dictatorship and democracy.

"Let us view it objectively before we outline the premises which lead to the conclusion that Mr. Roosevelt is preparing a coup d'etat.

"In a statement, veiled with unimportant reasons, he has made manifest to the American public his determination to gain control of the Supreme Court which, up to date, has opposed much of his New Deal legislation.

"Granted that there are not adequate laws to meet the present emergency . . . it cannot be granted under any consideration that the proper way to meet this situation is to retain the Constitution as it is and to pack the Supreme Court with 'yes men' who are willing to say black is white for the salvation of the New Deal.

"If Mr. Roosevelt and the New Dealers, together with the American people, determine to legislate a new NRA and a new AAA . . . that will be acceptable. It will not be acceptable unless it is constitutional. If these proposed pieces of legislation will not fit into the Constitution as it now is, why keep the Constitution as it is without amending it?"

LEWIS UNION ACTIVE IN N. E.

General strikes in the textile and shoe and leather industries threatened New England today as John Lewis's militant committee on industrial organization is pressing demands of unions here for 10 and 15 per cent wage increases.

Organizer William Mahan of the United Shoe and Leather Workers' Union said he was prepared to call out 17,000 employes of firms in Boston, Lynn, Salem, Peabody, Lowell, Chelsea and Newburyport.

He asserted that the strike was ordered by the committee on industrial organization, now moving for extension of gains it scored in its conflict with General Motors Corporation in Michigan.

At the same time Horace Bivirre, vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, voiced his organization's demand for an immediate 10 per cent wage increase throughout New England.

Although Bivirre did not set a date for a possible walk-out in the textile industry here, he said demands at his union were backed by the C. I. O. and would be pressed according to C. I. O. policy.

TEN SENATORS SEE PRESIDENT ON COURT PLAN

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Feb. 18—After warning his congressional leaders to "accept no compromise" on his proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court, President Roosevelt today confirmed personal supervision of the battle by summoning ten more senators to conferences at the White House.

Five senators from the far west in one group were called, ostensibly for a conference on the Boulder Dam. This group included Senators Mallory and Bulkley, Oregon Republicans; Bone and Schwellenbach, Washington Democrats, and Pope, Idaho Democrat. The first three were opposed to the President's court plan, the latter two favored it.

BARS COMPROMISE

Later, the President conferred with Senators Maloney (D.) of Connecticut, Moore (D.) of New Jersey and Brown (D.) of Michigan. Of these Moore has declared against the President's plan.

Later still, the President talked to Senator O'Mahoney (D.) of Wyoming, on far-reaching judiciary court, and Senator Byrnes (D.) of South Carolina, a staunch supporter of the proposed reform.

The President meanwhile sent word to Capitol Hill that he would accept no compromise, wanted the fight carried to the country, and a battle to the finish for its enactment into law.

OFFER NEW PLAN

It was reported after Senator Wheeler (D.), Montana, and Bone (D.), Washington, joined in sponsoring a proposed Constitutional amendment to give Congress power to overturn a Supreme Court decision by a two-thirds vote.

The two senators offered this plan as a substitute for the President's proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court in order to gain favorable decisions on New Deal legislation.

Verdict in Wharf Suit Goes to B. & M.

Suit for $100,000 brought against the Boston & Maine Railroad and the Mystic Terminal Company by the Ocean Steamship Company of Savannah concluded today in federal court when Judge George C. Sweeney directed a verdict for the defendants.

Trial of the suit resulted from charges by the plaintiff that a fraudulent lease was made by the Boston & Maine and its subsidiary for hire by the steamship company of a wharf in Charlestown.

Ex-Gov. Hardman Dies

Atlanta, Feb. 18 (AP)—Dr. Lamartine G. Hardman, 80-year-old former governor of Georgia, died of a heart ailment today in Emory University Hospital.

Slashed Mother Saved as Son, 18, Fells Father

An eighteen-year-old East Boston lad saved his mother from being bashed to death with a razor today when he felled his crazed father, who was hacking his face and head in the kitchen of their home.

The mother, Mrs. Caroline Macarral, 47, was treated for cuts around her face and ear at the East Boston Relief Hospital.

The father, Nicholas Macarral, 44, who has been an inmate of the Boston State Hospital in Mattapan, was returned there after he was taken into custody by East Boston police.

A daughter of the couple, fourteen, aroused the alarm that brought her brother Dominic, who was asleep in the house.

Dominic grabbed his father, disarmed the razor from his hand, and felled him with a blow of his fist.

Coal Miners Still Parley on Wages

New YOrk, Feb. 18 (AP)—The United Mine Workers and Appalachian coal producers turned over their wage and hour negotiations today to a joint committee.

The Joe Appalachian joint conference then recessed, subject to the call of Chairman Duncan C. Kennedy of Charleston, W. Va. He probably will not bring together the full conference until the negotiating committee, which includes John L. Lewis, either agrees or finds an agreement impossible.

Kiki "Sorry" For Tech Boy in Her Scanties Theft

KIKI ROBERTS

Marion "Kiki" Roberts, specialty dancer at the Old Howard, actually wore scanties, her public learned today.

But it took what police termed "a foolish Technology student" to turn the trick—and she gains him for the scanties.

He did it by becoming a "booster" as a fraternity stunt, passed the night in a police cell and then was "kicked out" as a "foolish student" after he was told he was lucky he was not shot.

No lecture he ever heard in a Tech classroom will have the same effect as the word of Station 2's "shipper," Captain Benjamin Wall.

"I gave him a good, fatherly talking to and sent him back to school," Wall said.

"I am convinced that it was just a foolish student prank.

"He understands now how foolish it all was. I did not bring any charges against him because I would not blacken the record of a good boy who fell for a line of guff from other foolish students."

ADMITTED THEFT

The student was taken in custody by Patrolman Frank Kohler as he came out the stage door of the theater.

He admitted that he entered an open stage door and went to the star's dressing room and took the undies.

He told police that he left 50 cents for the garment and thought that this would prevent his arrest.

When "Kiki" learned of the escapade, the stage star giggled:

"Wasn't that just too cute of him?"

Then she added hastily:

"I am glad the police did not do anything to him as I think he is more to be pitied than censured."

ONTARIO FAMILY CALM AT 21ST BABY'S BIRTH

Goderich, Ont., Feb. 18 (AP)—Life flowed smoothly onward today in the well-ordered farm household of Mr. and Mrs. James Masse—the birth of their 21st child caused scarcely a ripple.

Having linked at their new sister, to be christened Martha, these children marched dutifully to school:

Cecilia, 14.
Jean, 13.
Jean, 11.
Juliette and Antoinette, twins, 10.
Antoine, 8.
Leo, 7.
Marie, 20, went about her housekeeping, she bakes 40 loaves of bread each week and makes 20 pounds of butter to spread on it.

Her sisters, Yvonne, 18, and Jean, 15, help her with other miscellaneous work such as milking six cows daily.

Alphonse, 17, did the outside chores on the 150-acre farm while Papa Masse worked on the highway.

Tubbing about the house were Michael, 5, Priscilla, 4, and Peter, 3, who were allowed into their mother's room for a moment to see the baby and 15-months' old Monica.

Maurice M. is the eldest of the 21 and lives away from home with his wife. The other children who are out from under the family roof are Florence, now Mrs. Maurice Demorrise, Anthony, also married, Richard, married only Monday—the day before Baby Martha was born—and Therese, who is visiting in Detroit.

Why 81 Hairs Die Unborn Each Day

THE average healthy scalp sheds and grows 81 hairs each day. It is natural for hair to fall out—but it is also natural for new hair to replace that which falls. Obviously, then, baldness comes only when some unnatural condition, such as dandruff, keeps the hair-growing structure from replacing falling hair.

In order to help your scalp to grow hair naturally, you must (1) keep it clean; (2) keep it free from infection; and (3) stimulate the sources of nourishment. Thomas treatment helps you to accomplish these ends. Proper cleansing methods are provided; dandruff and other local infections are overcome; and the sources of nourishment are gently stimulated. Come in today for a FREE scalp examination and learn more about this reliable, proved scalp treatment.

KNOCK OUT COLDS IN FIRST ROUND

Give Colds No Chance to Wear You Down and Put You on Your Back!

Don't dally with a cold! It may end seriously—in the form of flu or pneumonia.

When a cold strikes, strike back with redoubled force. Depend on no mere makeshifts.

A cold calls for a cold treatment, not a preparation good for all kinds of ailments.

A cold also calls for internal treatment, for a cold is an internal infection.

Make Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine your treatment and you have hit a cold a body blow.

Bromo Quinine is effective because it is a cold tablet made expressly for the treatment of colds and nothing else. It routs colds quickly because it is internal treatment, fourfold in effect.

First, it opens the bowels, an advisable step in treating a cold.

Second, it checks the infection in the system, a vital measure.

Third, it relieves the headache and fever.

Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

Bromo Quinine tablets now come sugar-coated as well as plain. The sugar-coated are exactly the same as the regular, except that the tablets are coated with sugar for palatability.

Play safe when you've caught a cold. Go right to your druggist for a package of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine.

Start taking the tablets immediately, two at a time. In 24 hours your cold will usually be broken up.

Bromo Quinine tablets contain nothing harmful and are safe to take. You can get them at any drug store.

Be sure you get what you ask for—Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine! The few pennies' cost may save you a lot of worry and money.

DEATH FOR GUARDS HOVERS OVER STATE FARM

by inches, or his waist. He will neither eat nor talk. And he is only 18 years old.

BEYOND TALKING

When I last saw him, he was unable to make his words coherent. He had got beyond talking. He had a plea to make about something. Maybe for death. I don't know. I will never see him again. But he is still dying by inches.

Here is another manche naked about 65 years old pleading that he had finished his State Prison sentence in 1918. Well, let's see, that was 19 years ago.

He can't be out yet. But he was livid and suffering when I saw and talked with him. He even had a case pending about the dates, the way ties in at State Prison.

"Why, you can't lock me up for life," he said.

Of course we can. And we've got to. He has killed three persons.

Here is another prisoner. He killed a guard the last time he went on a rampage. He wants to sleep. Can't be bothered about explaining why he did it.

"Just let me sleep."

Here is a man standing against a wall with a blanket wrapped around him. He faces a mattress spark. One that the superintendent said couldn't be ripped. He did it in less than a half hour. Ripped it to shreds.

Here is a man making a speech to an invisible crowd as I looked through the peephole of the solid steel door of his cell.

THOUGHT FOR GUARDS

Here are 150 men, sitting dumbly on benches, waiting dumbly against a couple bowing and kissing the floor at my feet.

Here are guards, four of them locked in with those men and constantly keepers on the alert.

"Not one of these guards knows he will go home alive tonight," said James E. Warren, the superintendent.

The door is unlocked and I pass out of the room, which was even unheated until superintendent Warren came along, and saw that conditions were made as good as the institution could be.

Here is another room, with another large door for prisoners. The air is almost unbearable. Tension even glory in there. It is a constant effort only that keeps them reasonably calm.

Now, over to another wing of the rambling institution.

Here are boys and young men, imprisoned for life. They are classed as defective delinquents and are organized and disciplined in military fashion.

A bell rings, a command is barked out, and 'VOLUME stands at the sewing machine and march in with their shears, giving them up quite docilely.

"The reason they don't do something is because they have nobody to lead them," explains Warren.

More crisp commands. They march out into the yard. A few minutes later and they march in through a cafeteria—this was Warren's idea, to keep the food hot—and collect their rations, with type in buildings of the kind much freight.

from eight to 20 slices of bread each, and march to aluminum-topped tables to eat it.

Why go on? There are delinquent girls in another building. There are old insane men, and feeble-minded boys dying in the hospital. There are college bred men.

There are sentenced inebriates in another wing.

MANY QUIRKS IN LAW

Day in, day out. Hour after hour. House of insanity and weeks of inability. Time runs on. Death comes eventually but none too soon. There was one employe who got $12 apiece for the unclaimed bodies.

But this is not a story about the employes, although I wonder what that job at any price, and they are not well paid.

This is not a story about the food. The food is all right. Remember the Boston State Hospital disclosures in the Boston Sunday Advertiser?

Prisoners are allowed more for talking than the insane under the department of mental diseases. These inmates are listed as prisoners under the Department of Correction.

There is no correction, of course.

But there are many quirks of the law.

For example, the defective delinquent, although technically sentenced, if sentenced at all, to sewing machine and march up with their shears, giving them up quite docilely.

"The reason they don't do something is because they have nobody to lead them," explains Warren.

More crisp commands. They march out into the yard. A few minutes later and they march in through a cafeteria—this was Warren's idea, to keep the food hot—and collect their rations, with type in buildings of the kind much freight.

standing at Bridgewater, a which pieces these individuals der the Department of Correct when they are mental patients should be cared for in the manner possible as helpless sons.

The Bridgewater plant is a ra bling series of structures. You up several steps from one wen into the next and then down s eral steps into another wing.

JUST WAIT FOR MADNESS

Each section is a fire trap. Ea section is no more suitable for living creature than rooms would will it. I couldn't be thinking that these human bei were just innocents in there to wi till they die.

There are no mechanical r rangements to release a cell in case of fire. There is no r rangement whereby the guards keys would pass a long wi There are innumerable small n tions, in each of which the guar are locked in with the inmat waiting, waiting for an outbu of madness.

The whole institution is simp another case where the state is lumped different classes of s manes together, as if they were and perhaps the sooner they perish, the better. But they die long.

What the state should do is this. Build a state hospital for the so-called criminal insane. That includes those transferred, not via the courts, but direct from mental hospitals where they have been declared "criminal" because they assaged an attendant.

This hospital should be under the charge of the Department of Mental Diseases, with the full benefits of that department's psychiatrists.

The building should be as modern and as well-equipped as present-day science can make it.

In 1935, the legislature passed a law providing for a new institution for the criminal insane, to be known as Norfolk State Hospital, and to be built on state-owned property near the Norfolk Prison Colony.

But no appropriation was made to carry out the law.

I don't know what that sort of legislation is called, but I could think of a good name for it.

If the so-called criminal insane were moved, the quarters they now occupy could be used for properly housing feeble-minded delinquents.

With more room, the boys could be separated into classes and something could be done with the higher mental types.

Some might even get back into life eventually. Instead of being doomed, by conditions beyond their control, to life in this prison.

"FORGOTTEN MEN"

At present nobody is making a scientific study of these inmates. They are just being left to live and die where they are. Superintendent Warren believes the defective delinquent can be trained and corrected.

Nor is anybody making a scientific study of imprisonment for the violent insane.

"They are human beings and should have some sort of employment during the day. It is neither fitting nor proper that inmates should lie around without some form of occupational therapy."

That is Superintendent Warren speaking again, and he is not a scientist or a doctor. What have the doctors to say about this?

At present it is a problem for the state authorities. Formerly it was an even more serious situation, for mismanagement was the rule. Two superintendents were removed in a year. Products of the state farm were stolen. The inmates were mistreated.

One doctor, at least, was in duty who handed out drugs to the inmates, as well as a lavish share for himself. And he obtained his position through leading members of the state Legislature.

The place needs several full time psychiatric social workers. Every other mental hospital in the state has them, as Warren points out. But here, of course, the inmates are shoveled to live and to die.

The fire hazard needs to be remedied.

So far, except when killings occur, no whole fingered salesmanagement comes to the attention of the authorities. Bridgewater has been a place of forgetfulness.

Its proper readjustment to humane conditions and modern operation is provided for in the $2,500,000 program which has been prepared by certain experts, and which would remedy evils existing in the State Prison, the Concord Reformatory and Norfolk Prison Colony, as well as at Bridgewater.

(Tomorrow's Boston Evening American will describe the misuse of the Norfolk Prison Colony).

Death Only Release for Patients

Airplane view of the rambling institution at Bridgewater whoseveral kinds of mental patients are confined for life. While Superintendent James E. Warsand Commissioner of Correction Arthur T. Lyman have remedied former conditions, the inslion is a glaring example of the state's mishandling of its prison problems.

Nothing to do but sit around and wait—for what? Some of the 2300 inmates of Bridgewater State Farm where, besides inchriates, various classes of defectives—boys and girls and young men and women—and 900 criminally insane men are kept under the jurisdiction of the Department of Correction without benefit of the usual mental hospital treatment.

Shots Over School Win Upset Town

Anderson, Ind., Feb. 18 (AP)—Citizens of Anderson, town from the below disorders which put the city under martial law, heard shots last night.

National Guardsmen rushed from the armory. They blocked off four blocks in downtown area from which the shots seemed to come. Everyone was searched for weapons but none was found.

Suddenly the mystery cleared—somebody had been shooting firecrackers to celebrate the Anderson-e victory over Muncie in a high school basketball game.

That's Indiana High School basketball.

Fashionable Audience Attends Morning Musicale

By BETTY ALDEN

BOSTON will not be the only city to have a series of morning musicales if Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank of Chicago carries out the resolve which she made after hearing Lotte Lehmann at the Statler yesterday morning . . .

Mrs. Fairbank, who as Janet Ayer Fairbank is known all over the country as the author of some best sellers, has put over some of Chicago's biggest charity drives . . . She attended yesterday's concert as the guest of her cousin, Mrs. A. Barr Comstock, chairman of the advertising committee of the Boston Morning Musicales, . . . and she was so impressed with the idea of the musicale series as a method of raising funds for charity, that she gleaned all the details she could from Mrs. Comstock and other committee members, and is taking a whole sheaf of notes and programs back to the Windy City . . . with the idea of promoting something similar for one of her favorite charities . . .

At the coffee-fest, which preceded the concert, most of the chatter was approbation for the committee's selection of musicians for next year's program . . . it was the first inkling the subscribers had had that their subscriptions for the tenth season of the musicales would give them the privilege of hearing such famous stars as Richard Crooks, Yehudi Menuhin, Elisabeth Rethberg, Ezio Pinza, Horowitz, Lawrence Tibbett and Grete Stueckgold and her singing partner, Marcel Grandjany, whose joint concert next February 16 should be particularly pleasing since they sing duets together . . .

Virginia Shields

Scattered here and there among the nine hundred music lovers who attended yesterday's concert we noted Otto Krauss, husband of Lotte Lehmann, who listened to her from the governor's box at the rear of the Statler Ballroom . . . Also Mr. and Mrs. William E. Adams of Brookline . . . Mrs. George Saltonstall West and Mrs. Philip Stockton, both wrapped in mink, reluctantly leaving after the last beautiful encores . . . Mrs. Winthrop Jameson, in a gayly flowered print and a black straw sailor trimmed with the predominant colors of the dress, presenting the singer with a huge bunch of roses . . . Mrs. H. Parker Whittington, with a cluster of real lilies-of-the-valley pinned on her shoulder . . . these were a little surprise to one committee member from another, who picked them in her hothouse before setting out for the concert . . . the donor was Mrs. Maurice J. Curran of Andover . . .

Others present were Mrs. Frank M. Ferrin of Newton, who gave a small luncheon afterward for several out-of-town subscribers . . . Mrs. George Batchelder, Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer in copper colored wool, Mrs. Guy Warren Walker with orchids pinned on her ermine stole, Mrs. Charles Kincaid, whose turban was brightened with twisted bands of blue and green chiffon, Virginia Shields, one of the debutante ushers, and Sue Carl and Peggy Pierce, who looked very wide awake in spite of late hours at the Snow Ball the night before . . .

Tasha Tudor Announces Engagement

THE ENGAGEMENT of Tasha Tudor, daughter of Mrs. Rosamond Tudor of Mt. Vernon street, is of interest to society in New York as well as Boston, for Tasha's fiance, Thomas Leighton McCready, Jr., hails from New York . . . and Redding, Ct., where Tasha and her mother had a country place the year of Tasha's debut . . .

The bride-to-be, who was born Tasha Burgess and is still listed as such in the social register, assumed her mother's maiden name when it became apparent that she might become a dancer and appear before society audiences . . . the alliterative name was much more pleasing and has appeared in several Vincent Club programs announcing Tasha as one of the leading dancers of the cast . . . Her mother is also known by her maiden name in spite of the listing in the social register . . .

Tasha is the daughter of Starling Burgess, designer of the two America's Cup candidate Ranger . . . and also of the J class yachts, Enterprise and Rainbow . . . She is a member of the Junior League and Vincent Club and was a debutante in the 1934-35 season after graduating from Winsor School . . . At present she is a student at the Museum School of Fine Arts, preparing to become an illustrator . . .

Mr. McCready, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. McCready of New York and Redding, Ct., graduated from Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y., in 1929 and is a member of Chi Psi fraternity . . . Through his mother, the former Harriet E. Strong, he is a descendant of Elder John Strong, one of Boston's earliest settlers, and of General Adonijah Strong, commissary-general of George Washington's army . . . His paternal great-grandfather was Dr. Benjamin W. McCready, late dean of New York University's College of Medicine, and one of the founders of Bellevue Hospital . . .

Penelope Warren to Wed in April

MISS PENELOPE WARREN, who will become the bride of Richard Walcott on April 9, was one of the pourers yesterday afternoon at the tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Carl Pullen Dennett to announce the engagement of their daughter, Priscilla, to John Wallace Goodrich, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Goodrich . . .

Other girls who assisted at the tea tables were Andree Smith, Nancy Cassels and Rosamond Lockwood . . .

The newly-engaged pair plan a spring wedding and will undoubtedly spend a large part of the summer on the North Shore as usual . . . Both the Dennetts and the Goodrichs have summer homes in Manchester . . . Priscilla is a member of the Junior League, etc., and John attended Harvard with the class of 1934 . . . their clubs and family connections, etc., are listed in last evening's edition of the American so we do not repeat them . . .

Mr. Goodrich's father is a leader in Boston's music circles being head of the New England Conservatory of Music as well as a director of the Boston Opera Association . . .

College Catholic Clubs Plan Series of Lectures

With the thoughts of gay pre-Lenten supper dances just memories, Boston is launching itself into an amazing whirl of lectures.

College groups, alumnae organizations and clubs are represented in the series logical and meetings afternoon and evening are being utilized for talks on art, current events and literature.

Federation of College Catholic Clubs is sponsoring its second series of lectures scheduling for alternate Thursday evenings in St. Cecilia hall. Rev. William J. Daly, professor of ethics at Regis College, will conduct the series which opens Thursday evening with "Business Without Religion."

The second lecture, February 21, will deal with "Social Life Without Religion." On March 7 he will discuss "Family Life Without Religion" and on the following Thursday evening, March 14, he concludes his series with an address on "The Nature of God."

Marie McGuire of Boston Teachers' College has arranged the series assisted by John Henry Lawson of Emerson College, chairman of the Catholic Action committee. Other members of the lecture committee include Grace Hisky and Barbara O'Hagan of Simmons College, Virginia Morrissey of Pauline College, Helen Hurley of Emerson College and Henry Geerlof of Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Representing Tufts College on the committee is James Canavan. Marie Doherty is the committee member from Boston Teachers' College, while Boston University has four students helping with lecture plans, Herbert Greig, Oliver Judge, Thomas Welch and Marie Sheehan.

Winchester Guild To Give Lecture

Most delightful talks of the season are the ones given at the home of the members of the Winchester Guild of the Infant Saviour. These a lecture a month and morning coffee always precedes the discussions which are given by outstanding laymen. A musicale is another enjoyable feature of the affairs.

Mrs. Earl Wood is opening her home at 121 Church street, Winchester, for the next one, Friday morning at 11. Mrs. Francis E. Slattery, former president of the League of Catholic Women, will discuss "Communism" and Mrs. Anna Newman will be guest soloist.

Coffee will be served by Mrs. H. G. Osterburg, Mrs. James Gaffney and Mrs. Oscar Logue. Guests will be seated by Mrs. Thomas Hennessey, Mrs. Elias Belanger, Mrs. Franklin Evans, Mrs. William T. Connell, and Mrs. Franklin McCarte.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

GEORGE HOLLAND

I HEAR THAT: A Washington's Birthday formality of long-standing has been an exchange of handshakes between the Governor of the state and deputy superintendents of the Boston police force . . . The present dope has it that the custom will not be observed this year . . . Superintendent Edward W. Fallon has notified his deputies privately that the annual handshaking might be embarrassing . . . The grapevine has it that Governor Hurley is vexed at the lack of support he received from high policemen in the election . . . Asst. Dist. Attorney James Cassidy of the Suffolk County staff is seriously ill at home, and the gravity of his illness has been hidden even from his co-workers . . . The sound of another boom for a mayoralty candidate is taking on more volume . . . Although it is unlikely that he will run, City Councillor Dave Brackman, who is a state senator also, is the possible candidate being mentioned . . .

A Bee for Benny's Bonnet:

For months now, Jack Benny has been on the verge of playing Schubert's "The Bee" on his violin . . . Someone asked Baron Munchausen Jack Pearl the other night what he thought of Jack Benny's "Bee."

"I think it stings," the Baron declared.

Once Over Lightly:

An honorary dinner for Judge Israel Ruby is planned for the Mayflair, February 26 and Judge Israel Cheery of Lynn court will be feted at the Hotel Scatter in March . . .

Nathaniel Benchley, son of Bob Benchley, the humorist and actor, will be in the chorus of the Harvard Hasty Pudding Club show, March 28 . . . So will Benjamin Welles, son of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles . . . Gaspar Bacon, Jr., wrote the music . . . The long bar from the dismantled Wonder Bar, which went under the hammer last week, now stretches along 41 feet of the Press Cafe . . . New York has gone wild about a Brazilian singer named Bida Sayao . . . She's the Metropolitan Opera's newest star as a result of a Manon which critics acclaimed . . . Movie offers are tempting her already . . . Ted Lydon, son of Mike Lydon, the motion picture theater pioneer in South Boston and Dorchester, is managing the St. Moritz Cafe in Quincy . . . Michael Strange, first wife of John Barrymore, is scheduled to appear at the Charlotte Cushman Club tomorrow . . . Seen together at the Copley Square Grill: Bob Carney of Brookline, who used to pitch for Princeton and scorned offers from a half-dozen big league clubs, Bernard Shea of Worcester, former Holy Cross halfback, Frank Powers of Winthrop, Stuart Young of Wellesley Hills, and Col. Thomas Payne, Cambridge.

Human Interest:

For more than 20 years, the contents' page of many of the pulp magazines specializing in western stories have carried the by-lines of Edward T. ("Teddy") Glynn and Miles Overholt . . . In the issue of Western Story Magazine, for instance, of March 17, 1923, the contents listed: "Bound to the Blind," by Glynn and a line below, "Fatal Filing," by Overholt . . .

They met for the first time last night . . . Glynn is new head of the night copy-desk of this paper, and his fellow-contributor sits next to him on the rim of the horse-shoe desk.

Chatter:

Tommy Rodkin, who was manager of the late Jack Donahue's last show, "Sons O' Guns," came to town last night as manager of the George White "Scandals" unit . . . Mickey Dee and Paul Skinner, harmonizing in the Cocoanut Grove's Melody Lounge, scored from the start with a repertory that features fewer of the so-called "sophisticated" songs than their predecessors . . . Dee, at the piano, has marvelous rhythm . . . Henry Noyes treated Doug McOdrum, the newspaperman-pilot, with a champagne party at the Club Broadway . . . McOdrum induced the nightclub man to make his first flight . . . Boxing Promoter Rip Valenti bet the pilot a case of champagne he (Valenti) couldn't be induced to fly . . . There is a friendly "snatching" being plotted to make McOdrum's the winner.

Even Garbo Smiles at Robert's Endearments

Greta Garbo is certainly happy as Robert Taylor whispers his love in this scene from "Camille," which comes to Loew's State and Orpheum tomorrow.

'Lloyds' Tops Bills at Twin Houses

"Lloyds of London," Twentieth Century-Fox studio's first production, and "Clarence," Paramount's film attraction of Booth Tarkington's memorable comedy hit are the screen attractions at the Paramount and Fenway theaters, starting today.

Hollywood's newest and most talked about leading man, Tyrone Power, and beautiful Madeline Carroll are romantically paired in "Lloyds of London," story of a great and daring love that changed the history of the British Empire.

The story is unreeled against the action-filled background of those turbulent days when England was fighting for sea power, and reveals the power wielded by Lloyds, the world's most extraordinary business organization.

Freddie Bartholomew portrays the boy who eventually became the most powerful leader of the Lloyds organization. Tyrone Power is that boy grown to manhood. Sir Guy Standing heads a distinguished supporting cast that includes Virginia Fields, Douglas Scott and C. Aubrey Smith.

Tarkington's "Clarence," hilarious comedy of a family slightly on the balmy side, stars Ronnie Karns. Supporting players are Eleanore Whitney, Eugene Pallette, Johnny Downs, Charlotte Wynters and Spring Byington.

Fourth Week

"Guilty Parents," daring expose of the vice racket, goes into its fourth week at the Park theater, where the companion film is "Devil on Horseback." Producer George Herlihman's crime picture starring Lili Damita, Fred Keating and Del Campo.

"Devil on Horseback" is a charming story of a wealthy Latin ranch-owner who has become enamored of a glamourous American film-star, Del Campo and Lili Damita respectively.

Fred Keating is cast in an unaccustomed hero role.

At Tremont

James M. Barrie's tender love story, "What Every Woman Knows," starring Helen Hayes and Brian Aherne, is the feature picture on the Tremont screen for tomorrow and Saturday. The companion film is "Stars Over Broadway," featuring James Melton and Jane Froman. "Bachelor Girl," co-starring Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery, and "Sequoia," with Jean Parker, will have their final showing today.

Sterling Fare At Scollay, Modern

If you missed "Champagne Waltz" and "Black Legion," two fine pictures, you'll have an opportunity to see them during the week, commencing tomorrow, when they are to have a second-week showing in Boston at the downtown twin theaters, the Modern and the Scollay Square.

"Champagne Waltz," a production sparkling with wit, music, dancing and beauty, has for its stars, Gladys Swarthout, Fred MacMurray and Jack Oakie. Set against the romantic background of Vienna, its theme song is a medley of the old-fashioned waltz and the latest note in American swing melodies.

The companion picture on the twin theaters' double-feature bill, "Black Legion," is thrilling melodrama that was headline news some months ago.

ANN MARSTERS IN THE MOVIES

Eyes for Only One In 'Rush' Of Film

crosses and arranged in nice, logical order.

Coaxing Wins

They tell me that I am the only newspaper reporter ever to have witnessed a day's rushes. There is a rule against it—I don't know why, because I'm sure any reporter would come out of it quite unharmed. But it took quite a lot of coaxing and convincing to "establish a precedent."

When I was in the midst of establishing it, I felt a little alarmed. I was about to see myself in the movies, and I wasn't sure whether or not I'd recognize me. But I did, right away. All of a sudden, there I was before me, in my bonnet and my curls and my old-fashioned dress. Yes, I was a part of that colossal production, "High, Wide and Handsome."

I was standing with a group of people and we were all looking at Irene Dunne, who was singing. But I (in the audience) wasn't looking at Irene Dunne, because I only had eyes for me.

She Smiles

I could see that I was keeping time to the music. My head was lilting back and forth and my shoulders were swaying. I was smiling, too.

Then Irene Dunne spread out her arms and said, "Come on—everybody sing."

So practically everyone began to sing—except me. My director, Rouben Mamoulian, had told me NOT to sing—even before he'd heard me try. So I kept my mouth closed. Maybe I was supposed to represent a spirit of dissension in the happy gathering.

To tell the awful truth, I think I looked a little silly, just standing my head like that and smiling. And I didn't look quite so exceedingly beautiful as I'd hoped to look. Besides, I seemed to be the only person in the whole scene who wasn't singing . . . but, on second thought, I guess I didn't notice anybody else.

Anyway, I hadn't once looked in the camera, because I'd forgotten all about being "camera shy."

All Over

Suddenly it was all over. The lights went on in the little projection room, and the producers and the directors were leaving.

Mamoulian aped me, and I smiled (in a questioning way).

"How did you like yourself?" he asked.

But I fooled him and said: "Don't you think I was wonderful?"

"Yes, you were," he said. "You were marvelous."

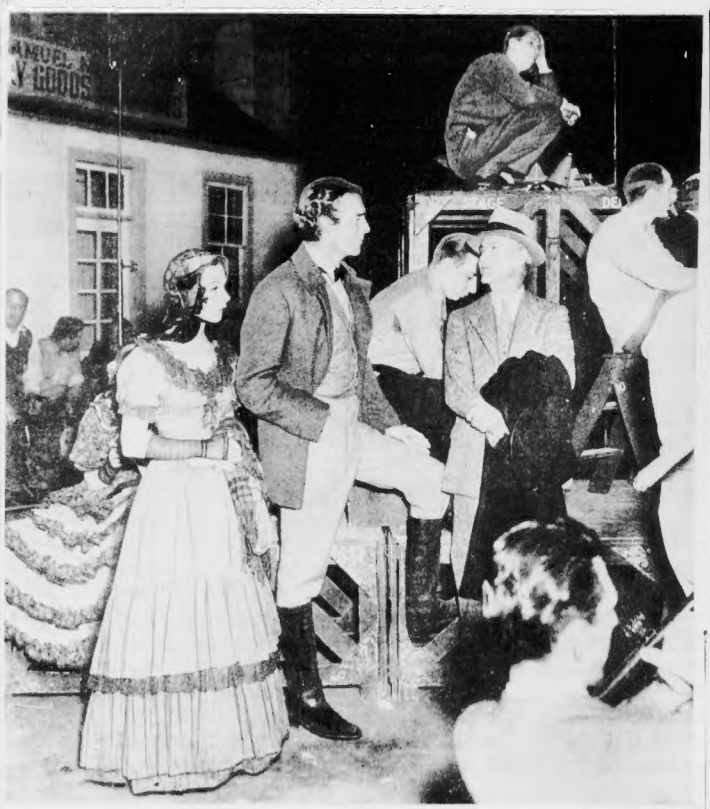
"But don't you think I could have been singing in that scene?"

"Why," he said, and seemed surprised, "I thought you WERE singing."

A day in the life of an extra girl. That will be the subject of the sixth article in the series, "Ann Marsters in the Movies," in tomorrow's Boston Evening American. It is an article full of facts, gleaned first-hand from the extra girls themselves by a reporter, temporarily turned film actress to get the inside information.

Employment ads published in the Boston American-Sunday Advertiser are broadcast each morning with the correct time between 7:45-8:00 A. M., one hour later on Sundays, at no additional charge to the advertiser.

Working on the Movie Set - - - - Then Relaxation



GETTING READY FOR WORK—Here's a scene on the set of Paramount's "High, Wide and Handsome," as directors and assistant directors are getting ready for another scene in that production. Ann Marsters is pictured talking to Randolph Scott, who has the male lead in the production. Bending over, behind Scott is Joe Youngerman, assistant director of the picture. The man with the overcoat on his arm is Ned McCarthy, lawyer and polo player, a visitor to the set.

AN INTERLUDE—Life isn't all hard work in the studios, although much of it is. Here Miss Marsters is pictured having luncheon in the Paramount Studio commissary, between the "shooting" of scenes, with Raymond Walburn, one of the principal players in "High, Wide and Handsome." He has the role of the father of Irene Dunne, star of the production.

Mrs. Phoebe Hearst Paid High Tribute At Tree Planting

Los Angeles, Feb. 18 (U.P.)—Scores holding the warmth and breadth of the Pacific Coast were founded 40 years ago by Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst, said Mrs. Alice McClellan Birney, as one tree was planted on the grounds of every school controlled by the Los Angeles Parent Teacher District of Parents and Teachers.

Accepting the tree on behalf of the whole district, Mrs. W. R. Goddard, president, paid glowing tribute to the memory of Mrs. Hearst and Mrs. Birney, who in 1897 formed the first "Mothers' Congress" in Washington, D. C., and which sponsored the greatest child welfare organization in all history, the National Congress of Parents and Teachers.

The tree was officially presented by John F. Dalton, president of the Board of Education, and Virginia Kinsey, supervisor-director of Los Angeles city schools.

Recalling briefly the early history of Parent-Teacher work, Mrs. Birney pointed out how the idea, originally conceived by Mrs. Hearst, was developed by Mrs. Hearst, who, for five years, financed the work of organization, becoming perpetual guarantor of the movement.

"We honor Mrs. Hearst today, not only for her work in the P. T. A., but also for the other things she did that children might secure the best in physical, moral and mental training," Mrs. Morrison said.

"Fourteen years before the P. T. A. was founded, Mrs. Hearst organized her first kindergarten in San Francisco, and aided with contributions of her time and money to nursery schools in the West.

AIDS OTHERS

"She established a system of scholarships in several American universities, gave funds for buildings at the University of California, and placed many of her art treasures in museums that the youth of the country might study the cultures of past civilizations."

Among the P. T. A. officials who attended the ceremony were Mrs. George M. Hearst, Mrs. Donald Ryan, Mrs. J. E. Finley and Mrs. S. S. Abrams. The second district will hold another Founders' Day program Tuesday afternoon at Girls' High School, at the group's regular monthly meeting.

At that time members will contribute to the Founders' Day extension work, which includes a program of adult education throughout the state. The funds are also used to defray expenses for P. T. A. work in sparsely populated communities, and for outdoor courses on parent-teacher work.

P. T. A. WREATH ON FOUNTAIN

HONOR MRS. PHOEBE HEARST

(Special to Boston Evening American)

San Francisco, Feb. 18—On the fountain in Golden Gate park which bears the inscription "To Phoebe Apperson Hearst from her friends," members of San Francisco's Parent Teacher Association yesterday placed a wreath in tribute to Mrs. Hearst's part in founding the National Parent Teacher organization.

For the last eight years on Hearst P. T. A. Founders' Day, February 17, the P. T. A. has placed a wreath on the Hearst fountain as a tangible remembrance of the work Mrs. Hearst did to further the education of American children in San Francisco, and in other communities throughout the United States.

MANY HONORS

At the simple ceremony following the scholarship by the WPA band Mrs. Edward De Martini, Founders' Day chairman, placed the wreath on the fountain and Mrs. Joseph G. Mercandetti, president of the second district P. T. A., outlined the history of the organization from the day in 1897 when the national group was organized by Mrs. Hearst and Mrs. Alice McClellan Birney.

"We honor Mrs. Hearst today, not only for her work in the P. T. A., but also for the other things she did that children might secure the best in physical, moral and mental training," Mrs. Mercandetti said.

"Fourteen years before the P. T. A. was founded, Mrs. Hearst organized her first kindergarten in San Francisco, and aided with contributions of her time and money to nursery schools in the West.

AIDS OTHERS

"She established a system of scholarships in several American universities, gave funds for buildings at the University of California, and placed many of her art treasures in museums that the youth of the country might study the cultures of past civilizations."

Among the P. T. A. officials who attended the ceremony were Mrs. George M. Hearst, Mrs. Donald Ryan, Mrs. J. E. Finley and Mrs. club organizations.

Mothers Observe PTA Founders' Day in Chicago

Special to Boston Evening American

Chicago, Feb. 18—Brightly burning candles, the cutting of birthday cakes, and impressive ceremonies today had marked the Chicago observance of the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the Parent-Teacher Association.

At ceremonies throughout the city thousands of mothers met to do honor to Mrs. Phoebe Apperson Hearst and Mrs. Alice McLellan Birney, the founders. It is their dream that has been realized in the organization that now unites mothers from coast to coast in a common bond of service.

Speaking before a hundred mothers at the Kelly high school, Mrs. Clark Reed, chairman of the Chicago affairs committee of the organization, said:

"The work of Mrs. Hearst and Mrs. Birney has produced results. In our gratification today we must not lose sight of the fact that it was their idea, and their work, that made the gratifying success of our organization possible."

Memorial Mass For Tomasello

With many friends and relatives in attendance, a solemn requiem high mass in observance of the first anniversary of the death of Joseph A. Tomasello of Jamaica Plain will be held Saturday morning at 7:45 o'clock in St. Thomas Church, Jamaica Plain.

Rev. William J. Casey, pastor of the church, will be celebrant of the solemn mass and during the Communion service will sing "Ave Maria." After the death of the 23 year-old son and bereaved

Attack by Youths Fatal to Janitor

Providence, R. I., Feb. 18 (AP)—A 66 year-old school janitor, beaten by four youths in a school yard yesterday, died today in Rhode Island Hospital.

Cosmo Forte, the janitor, suffered a possible fractured skull and other injuries when the youths, one a juvenile, attacked him, down.

The youths got into an argument with Clark after he had ordered them from the Kenyon street school building, police said.

CAPT. REDMAN FUNERAL HELD

Mayor Mansfield, leaders in state and civic government and hundreds of bereaved friends, today attended funeral services for John Redman, retired Boston fire department captain, at St. Anthony's Church, Allston.

Honorary pallbearers included Mayor Mansfield, Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin, Judge Thomas H. Connelly, Election Commissioners Frank Mc-Kenny and Frederick Dowling, Civil Service Commissioner Thomas H. Green, and City Councillors John A. Agnew and Edward Gallagher.

Reverend Edward McDonough, pastor of the church, celebrated the solemn requiem mass with Reverend John J. McShea and Father Gabriel, C. P., as deacon and subdeacon.

GAY CORONATION COLORS IN STYLE

THEY'RE CROWN BLUE, RUBY RED

You don't have to be a queen to look every inch of one in the season's new coronation colors—crown blue and ruby red.

Exclusive of the gayety of a new and happier England on England palaces with the splendor and sound of pageantry—fashion has picked up her fevered preparations where she abruptly left off last fall.

As far as fashion goes, the recent could not have been more inspired one had King Edward and Mrs. Simpson remained serenely in the Court picture.

While the official colors of red and blue, chosen for the crowning of Edward, have been retained for the ascension of George VI, the tones are infinitely more gay and vivid than the usual shades of the royal colors.

Yes, it's a coronation year, unquestionably—and the Fashion Congress has found it out.

With the eye of the smart world focusing on everything from restaurant settees to gentlemen's hose, the couturiers put a smart foot forward for spring, 1937, by presenting a pageant of regally lovely clothes in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel yesterday.

Mrs. Marshall Fabyan, Jr., the former Sarah Palfrey, tennis champion was chairman of the style show and the honor for her assisting a group of soldier-boy sportswomen. They were:

Mrs. Arthur Hill, Jr., Mrs. Ernest B. Dane, Jr., Miss Katherine Whitney, Miss Barbara Bruce, Miss Susan Brewer, Mrs. John W. Dove, Mrs. Alfred Holder, 2nd, Mrs. Howland S. Warren and Miss Eleanor Williams.

Suits which took the topmost were beautifully interpreted in two-piece button-down-the-front affairs. Pre-dictions were all over the sartorial scene and ranged every note from the effect among jaunty from padded, exaggerated shoulders.

Commendable treatment was given a striking Chanel box-cape suit with star buttons. The suit was in cocoon brown and navy red. This was displayed with an exotic turban (crown blue again) which had endless streamers of diaphanous chiffon.

The chiffon wound around the wearer's head in innumerable soft folds, lending a Garden-of-Allah glamour to the ensemble.

A coat ensemble that particularly pleased the jurors was gray and carnelian red. A gray striped suit with carnelian hat, was awarded a silver tag.

From Harlem came the inspiration to dramatize the fantastic headdress worn by Harlem ladies in the Manhattan parades.

This hat, as daring an affair as Boston has seen in months, was designed by John Fredericks model of beige rice straw. There was some discussion of opinions over this affair and the bonus for her assistant a group of soldier-boy sportswomen. They were.

Jolson to Supervise Ruby Keeler Film

By EDELLA G. PARSONS

Los Angeles, Feb. 18 — Before she has had time to get over the excitement of her first picture, "Broadway Melody of 1936," in which she made a hit opposite Jack Benny, Ruby Keeler is to be starred in another musical production, "Mother Carey's Chickens," which Al Jolson will supervise. Jolson is Miss Keeler's husband.

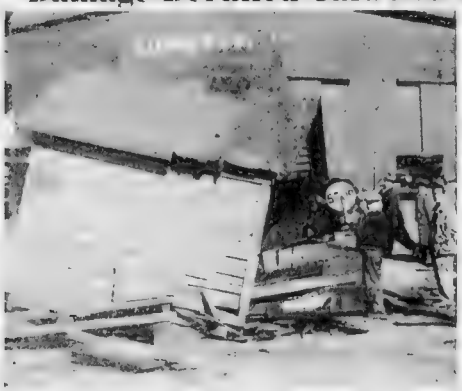
Damage Derailed Cars Did in Charlestown Vandal Rail Wreck



ONE OF THE WRECKED R. R. SHANTIES

Two shanties were toppled from their foundations and several parts of the two dangling coal cars [illegible] in Charlestown today.

A DAMAGE DEALING COAL CAR

Two rear cars of the 18-car train became derailed and before the train was halted much damage was done. The shanties and parts of the poles were strewn for about an eighth of a mile along the track. Pieces of iron, placed by boys, were thought to have caused the wreck.

BORROWINGS

Records OF SEC SHOW Gains

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

One of the marked indications of American recovery is the increased call by industry for "new" money in order to finance purchases of equipment and plant.

A study of SEC records reveals that net new security issues for such purposes were nearly five times as great last year as in 1935, but the total was still well under pre-depression years.

At the same time it is to be noted that new issues for refunding of obligations totaled some 600 million dollars more than in the previous year. However it is the former type of issue that is the more encouraging because it is the proceeds from such borrowings that really expose the public's confidence in business prosperity. It is largely spent for heavy equipment and permanent improvements and additions and stimulates industrial activity, employment and commerces all along the line. During 1937 there should be no lack of such additional sales in the volume of such obligations if the prosperity so far in store for the American industrial empire.

The English markets are not ahead of the general bull market movement progressing throughout the world powers, particularly British Dealt. Copper shares in particular, as international markets refined the belief that ultimate curtailment of shortages will bring about a sharp advance in receiving the orders. At the same time demand of manufacturers increasing a tremendous tonnage in the months ahead. Tin shares in the meantime do not seem to be out where inordinate activity is expected to develop and exist. The outside trader as a consequence is prone to make your purchases of Malayan shares on reactions and thus far in February. Export statistics were underlined to be extraordinarily encouraging. Anglo-Argonaut armament programs promising even greater business ahead.

The French franc at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions declined 10% of a cent in active trade. Sterling was unchanged at $4.95%.

MARKET Turns QUIET

PRICE TRENDS IRREGULAR

New York, Feb. 18—Gains of more than a point in the leaders were cut sharply today as the stock market turned dull and irregular.

Rails, an exception, held to gains of about a point as Baltimore & Ohio set a new peak for the year and Illinois Central equalled its best price of the last year.

Amazing was protected proved in the market today as the rails once more were tremendously buoyant.

Profit taking wiped out a point gain in Steel, and a fractional one in Chrysler. General Motors, however, held to a small part of its gain after opening at a new peak.

Stocks were about evenly divided today but not part of their advance. Bethlehem U. S. Steel and Youngstown Sheet were up almost a point each.

International Nickel moved a point higher while Allied Chemical, White Anaconda and Kennecott were up fractionally. American Telephone rose over a point and Air Reduction and Du Pont were off a point each.

Sales totaled 1,000,000 shares.

Grains eased slightly.

Timely Items

Traders found some encouragement today in believing that steel mill operations having influenced hope perhaps see them by mid-summer at 80 and 85 per cent of capacity during the next three months. The belief was that some of the major consumers were said to have increased materially their buying demand and that by February. Export demand was underlined to be extraordinarily encouraging because of large armament programs promising even greater business ahead.

The French franc at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions declined 10% of a cent in active trade. Sterling was unchanged at $4.95%.

Bank Clearings Show Decrease

New York, Feb. 18 (AP)—Bank clearings in 25 leading cities during the Tuesday week ended Feb. 17 totaled $4,845,000,000, a decrease of 1.2 per cent from clearings of $4,845,000,000 in the full week a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet reports today.

In the preceding week clearings were 7.9 per cent above the 1936 comparative.

Clearings at New York City alone totaled $2,249,000,000 as compared with $2,276,000,000 last year.

Clearings at Chicago amounted to $324,000,000 a gain of 8.0 per cent over $299,750,000 last year.

Permanent Peace Needed In Industry

THE END of the automobile strike contributes little to the SOLUTION of the difficult problems involved.

It contributes LESS to the PREVENTION of future disputes between workers and employers, the consequences of which are so disastrous.

The automobile strike was a long battle expensive to both sides and to the country.

The situation resulting from it is like that resulting from the shipping strike.

The elements of conflict are removed in neither, and therefore NOTHING IS FINALLY DISPOSED OF.

Thus, even when these strikes are settled, they are NOT settled.

The country needs something more than INTERVALS of peace BETWEEN labor conflicts.

America needs a permanent program of peaceful relations between capital and labor.

It must have the assurance of adjustment of labor problems through COMPULSORY ARBITRATION, with guarantees against STOPPED PRODUCTION and IDLENESS OF WORKERS during the period of adjustment.

Moreover, the country needs LAW ENFORCEMENT.

In a republic, the law is the expressed wish of the majority, for the benefit of the majority, and THE WILL AND WELFARE OF THE MAJORITY MUST PREVAIL.

State Weighs Child Labor

MASSACHUSETTS again considers ratification of the Child Labor Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

The consideration should be careful and deliberate. The matter is far too important to be brushed lightly aside without proper attention to the public sentiment that has caused so many States to ratify the Amendment.

It is true that Massachusetts has been foremost in outlawing child labor and providing constantly better educational opportunities.

But always our best efforts have been more or less defeated by competition from backward States which permit the utilization of boy and girl labor to pile up illicit profits.

Today throughout the country the number of children under sixteen leaving school for work in areas reporting to the Federal Department of Labor is rapidly increasing.

The situation is constantly more serious. Obviously, something must be done.

Massachusetts certainly will not permit herself to sink to the level of the lowest sweatshop States. Clearly they must be raised to our level. And that is the real purpose of the proposed amendment.

History and experience argue in favor of ending the reckless squandering of the birthright of American youth by clothing Congress with constitutional power to emancipate the whole American family from the dangerous and disgraceful bondage of child labor.

Free Sources Of News

THE Legislature of the State of Maine is considering enactment of a law protecting newspaper men in their right to respect confidential news sources.

The essential part of this bill is not that it will protect newspaper men, but that it will assure TO THE PEOPLE the right TO BE INFORMED.

Maine should give its people this protection, as should ALL States.

It is vitally important to the preservation of a free press in America that the several States pass such legislation.

It is equally important that the principle of safeguarding news sources be recognized by national law.

"A Crime Plot Factory"

ALAN C. FRAZER, this newspaper's brilliant reporter, investigating conditions in Massachusetts state hospitals and prisons, visits the Concord Reformatory and finds what he calls a "crime plot factory."

He tells of 70 per cent of the inmates having served time previously, of young first-offenders mingling with the more hardened criminals, of boys of school age walking about with bandits and the dregs of society.

He quotes Major Michael J. Dee, the superintendent, as saying:

"The influence on the younger boys of the long-timers and the men who have served time before counteracts all possible influences for good."

Rightly such revelations should further shock Massachusetts, her complacency already badly shaken by the exposure of conditions at the Boston State Hospital.

But being shocked and doing nothing will accomplish nothing. And the deplorable condition will continue to exist, growing worse with the passing years.

The time has come for action. LET'S CLEAN HOUSE. Let's extend our Boston Hospital inquiry to every state institution. And by all means let's have reformatories that reform.

War Veteran's Wise Advice

AS the nation celebrates National Defense Week, all military, civic and patriotic organizations united in the observance, consideration should be given to the advice of those that fought in the last war and have the wisdom of experience.

Such advice is this statement issued to the Disabled Veterans of the World War by State Department Commander Edward Walsh:

"Most of our people know only too well of the billions of dollars wasted and the thousands of lives lost needlessly during the World War by reason of unpreparedness.

"With Europe an armed camp, it is imperative that our citizens rededicate anew an adequate preparedness program based upon the National Defense Act."

America wants no repetition of the sad events of 1917 and 1918, when lack of proper training meant actual suicide for thousands of young men. Life should not and must not be sacrificed needlessly.

Crowding Him Off the Road!

By Nelson Harding

The hoggish tactics here displayed
Don't make a very pleasant scene,
The motorist forced off the road
By the tax on gasoline.

As every year these taxes hurt
And larger grows taxation's truck,
The costs of motoring increase
And leave car owners out of luck.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—Europeans in the metropolis to see the sights invariably ask to see the Savoy dance hall in deep Harlem. And, of course, "Stamping at the Savoy" has become a part of the routine of every radio swing program. The Savoy is a black and white ballroom with a patina of respectability. No hard liquor is served and it has never had a scrap. It is an outlet for the frenzy for barbaric dancing. Porters, maids, cooks, elevator boys as well as high toned folk—let themselves go in squirms, struggle holds, and public necking.

There are some venturesome folks who indulge the epileptic seizures of the Lindy Hop, the favorite dance, with the hostesses, but mostly the dancers are colored. The hall occupies a full block front on Lenox at 142d street.

Modern in lighting and decor, the music is hot and continuous. Its clientele attains a half million total yearly and the gross is $270,000. The owners are white and the place has had uninterrupted success since 1926. Although other night life in Harlem is in partial eclipse.

Mrs. Winfield Sheehan, the former Maria Jeritza of opera fame, has touched off an Austrian schuss craze in the neighborhood of her husband's estate in Hidden Valley, near Los Angeles. Mrs. Sheehan acted as her own architect and contractor, appearing on the lot daily to superintend construction.

Two new and goofy night club clowns are keeping the cafe statuists up a bit longer. They are Jack White and Henry Youngman, cavorting in two of the less pretentious pudding houses. White's flurry of nuttiness is like this: Mrs. Jock Whitney, Helen Wills and a social bandsome enfer. White glances at them and observes: "I'll make it a foursome after the show." Youngman also cracks wise about the seat holders. Seeing Jimmy Durante and Ray Bolger at a table he observes: "There they are talking—back to back." Brace is just fair amusing in extemporaneous blurts.

For many years the biggest of the uptown drug dopers was in Columbus Circle after midnight. Here the overlords met their peddlers and distributed their supplies. But Narcotic Squad vigilance finally broke that up. I am told distribution is now in the public parks, notably Central. A distributor sauntering down a lonely path tosses a packet in some bush or gully. He waits until he hears a pre-arranged whistle and knows the packet has been retrieved.

And whistling is reminding! It has become a vanquished art along New York streets. A psychologist declares it's an evanishment due to depression and one not as yet recaptured. It used to be residential streets were lively in the early morning with the shrill of whistlers and there were clarion chirrupings among arrivals to open shops, sweep the sidewalks, wash the windows and polish the signs. The joun boys who raced their go-devil carts through the garment district were celebrated for whistling. So much so they inspired poetical effusions about the Gotham bards. But a ride through the district shows the whistlers stilled there, too.

At last Madison avenue is to have a perfume shop in black and silver that will handle scents for men only. There are now more than 100 varieties of aromas designed to appeal only to the masculine smell. Jack Dempsey and even Jimmy Durante like a dash of perfume on their kerchiefs.

Listen, World!

She's so tired of all these smart success books! Clever times, that tell you how to analyze everybody from the vegetable dealer to your neighbor's cat . . . and achieve power against soul-shattering odds.

Somehow, being just an ordinary body, these dramatic crises don't seem to come her way.

What she'd like to know is just how to live through "one of those days" when you feel like last week's sponge cake, but have got to keep going regardless.

Have I ever had days like that? And if so, won't I give her a few tips?

Have I? Don't bring on one of my spells by fool questions like that, sister. "One of those days" are my specialty. In fact, I invented them. And here's how I handle the cantankerous contraptions.

First place, when I wake, knowing such a horrible era is upon me, I no longer try to fool myself that it isn't. I don't bounce blithely out of bed, assuring myself that every cloud has a silver lining. To the contrary, I draw a long breath, grit my teeth, arise slowly with murder in my heart, and proceed to brush my teeth.

SELF-ANALYSIS

I brush my teeth with furious intensity. After which, I proceed to do all my other chores with the same poisonous pessimism—the reason for which I'll explain carefully. And as I proceed, I converse with myself.

"Elsie, old girl," says I to me, "keep your shirt on. There's nothing unusual about this day. It's just 'one of those times.' If you feel blue, bored, discouraged, and fed up with life generally, you have nothing whatever on the corner patrolman, the grocer, the 'phone girl, in all probability, the President of these United States.

"Yes, I know, you're all set for one of your tantrums. You'd like to get down n' wallow in a swell orgy of self-pity . . . n' blame everyone . . . n' threaten to kill yourself . . . n' rates Cain generally. But nix, woman—NIX!

"It doesn't really matter a hoot whether you're sad or merry . . . there are jobs to be done and it's up to you to do them. So get busy! Stop thinking how you feel. Grab each job in turn and give it the best you have. Then, even if you haven't produced a masterpiece, you will at least have saved your self-respect. Which is something."

That's what I say to Elsie as I fling along through "one of those days." Generally speaking, I try to limit my conversation to the old gal alone, knowing, from embarrassing experience, that if I can grab myself an audience I forthwith bust into enough bleats, wheezes and sniffles for a hundred head of sheep. Silence on "one of those days" is not only golden. It's tax exempt government bonds.

So, speaking together, I and myself, we plug through the day. Keeping the old mouth shut and the heel on the move. Using what spunk God gave us and biting the kitchen range when that gives out.

KEEPING THE FAITH

Then, when it's all over . . . and the little tyke's in bed . . . and the supper dishes are put away . . . I ease up on the spur a bit. And I go off in a quiet corner, with a picture of The Boy and an old book, and begin to read. My mouth moves slowly . . . my face feels like a bent bumper . . . there's a lump in my throat that would choke Boulder Dam. And at first what I say are only words—meaningless—

"The Lord is my shepherd . . . I shall not want . . .

"He maketh me to lie down to green pastures . . .

"He leadeth me beside the still waters."

Slowly, wearily, the dry words slip between my mumbling lips. Then, far off, a warmth starts like a quickening. Like strong hands lifting a tired child. I feel a Presence supporting me. My lips stop mumbling. Deep in my heart, the lovely song takes on—

"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil; for Thou art with me . . . I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

One of those Days is over. I have made no masterpiece—established no record. But He knows I have tried—to keep the faith.

The Flood Problem

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Edwin C. Hill

The protection of Pittsburgh from floods would be a comparatively simple job of engineering, but it would involve, incidentally, the destruction of the Pennsylvania Railroad line down the valley. Talking with a friend the other day, who happens to be a government engineer who had studied national flood control long and diligently, I was appalled at the complexity of that problem, not only in its physical, but its economic and human aspects.

There seems to be no stopping point in this undertaking of decades, possibly of a century or more—wrenching and adjusting our national economy, redistributing population, making over our very house of life. The above allusion to Pittsburgh and the Pennsylvania Railroad is typical. I was talking to a friend of mine the other day—I could use his name. He is a colonel in the army and has the typical army reserve about publicity.

"About 14 good-sized dams would do the business, so far as Pittsburgh is concerned," he said, "but the cost would be stupendous. As an engineering problem it is simple; as a matter of business accounting it is complex and dubious. It might be cheaper just to leave Pittsburgh up on high, dry ground. The same can be said of Cincinnati, Louisville and other cities. And there, in my opinion, is the real urgency of the flood menace.

"The danger and ruin is an ever-recurrent threat to the cities, rather than to the farming regions. In the long, open sweeps of the rivers, between the larger cities and towns, the disaster, happily, isn't what we think it is. In fact, from one point of view, it isn't a disaster at all. There are vast stretches of Ohio and Mississippi farmland which would be barren clay if it were not for the flood rolling down millions of tons of silt every year or two. Going back 20 or 30 years, there are many instances where bumper cotton crops have followed some of the most disastrous floods.

SIMILAR TO NILE

"Barring the cities, the property damage isn't what it might appear to be. Many of those buildings floating down the river are just shacks and chicken coops. I don't mean to be hard-hearted about those poor people who live along the river bank, but with a little more guidance and a little more mobility they can adapt themselves. And it is quite feasible, also, to adapt farming to the certainty of the floods, to take advantage of the silt deposits without farmers being mussed up by the deluge.

"That, of course, was the story of the Nile, for many hundreds, if not thousands of years. It was hit-and-run agriculture, but it worked. When the water ebbed, the farmers would move down to the river, plant their crops and harvest them, and when the river was raging again, they would be safe on high ground, working as stone cutters, most of them. These part-time farmers are supposed to have helped a lot in the building of the pyramids.

"Personally, I think it would be quite feasible to organize farming on this basis in our flood regions —once we had safe-guarded the cities—but there's a complication here which probably would block that argument right at the start. That priceless, life-sustaining silt is the top-soil of our great, fertile middle-western wheat regions, which in a few decades more will be barren, eroded, lifeless deserts unless we can impound this runaway soil in the upper regions.

"A compromise might be the organizing of lower valley farming on the ancient Nile technique for a century or so, until we can through a vast, elaborate and expensive—putting it mildly—integration of flood control, irrigation, waste and soil conservation and power development by hundreds of great reservoirs on the tributaries of the rivers."

Just as a curtain-raiser for the dam and reservoir solution, it may be noted that the Grand Coulee Dam, now under construction in the State of Washington, will cost $25,000,000 more than the Panama Canal. It will make fertile an area of rich soil about equal in area to the States of Rhode Island and Delaware. It will develop a vast amount of hydro-electric power and, of course, will be a great advance in flood control. It creates stupendous new wealth and involves stupendous expense.

The unified, integrated reservoir plan, requiring scores of such gigantic projects, chalks up costs which make an engineer wear blinders when he looks in that direction. Nobody dares take a real look at the probable bill for renovating and remodeling our continent, badly messed up by wanton and irresponsible tenants.

Alp, Switzerland
Feb. 18.

Senator Wm. Borah
Congress, U. S. A.
Dear Sen. Borah:

Just a line to tell you about the Alp Mountains, which me and the wife Mabel is now setting on top of. We are having a lovly time wishing you was here, Sen. Borah. You really ought to come over & take a look at what you have kept America out of. The League of Nations is what I mean.

The League was thunk up by Pres. Wilson, back in the days when he was a Democrat and you was a Republican, so as all the nations could keep the peace between wars.

Well, its a good thing America never joint the League, because the Alp Mountains is now full of more kinds of forriners than anywhere in the entire rest of the U. S. A., where we are a 100 per cent forriners, except for the 90 seven Indians and a couple of other little tribes.

Me and Mabel like to threw a fit when we seen the bldgs. which the League meets in. My golly, Sen. Borah, them bldgs. is about 1/8 mile long. They are bigger than 40 r. r. stations.

I ast a Swiss friend about it, I says, "For heaven sake, do they need a bldg. that big to make the world safe from Democracy?" "Yes," he says, "they got to keep the League from busting up, for they won't fight, except when they are signing Peace Treatys."

It's lucky for you that we kept out of this mess, Sen. Borah, or you would be over here in the Alps right now pacing up & down cup & trying to find out where wife is running the League of Nations today. You would feel silly in one of them long frock coats & silk hat, which is the Official Morning Costume of the League died off a couple of years ago, but these Diplomats is still holding the Wake.

By the way, Sen. Borah, them League Bldgs. is fixed up all Soundproof and Padded, as the Delegates can't hear any war going on outside.

But the war will get closer purty soon, because my Swiss friend says this little country will most likely be the Belgium of the next big fight. He is glad the League of Nations built them big bldgs. in the Alps, because President Wilson's dream of peace will make a swell army barracks.

Yure's truly,
WINSTON NORMAN.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

It is surprising to hear Dr. Townsend, the old age pension advocate, say the country needs a "rebellion against most of the existing taxes and proposed new taxes." Of course, he would exempt the tax which he proposed to finance his $200-a-month pension plan. Every new tax advocate thinks his tax is all right.

Dr. Townsend's charge that "under our hodge-podge tax system, the average citizen's pocket are 'soaked' and dispossessed of their property because of the unjust taxes levied upon them" is correct only in part. The poor are "soaked." But the tax bills of the "rich" and middle class are entirely escape the tax collector.

The fact is that nobody, rich or poor or in between, escapes taxation. In one way or another, all of our people are "soaked." They are taxed from the cradle to the grave, from dawn to dusk to dawn, to sickness or to health, whether they work or loaf, on everything they use. There is no more erroneous notion than that only a comparatively small group of people are taxpayers. Everybody bears a share of the tax burden and that share is growing larger and heavier all the time.

The United States Chamber of Commerce suggests that increases in the Social Security tax rates for old age retirement should be postponed until 1947, that is sound economics. The Chamber points out that the present 1 per cent tax on payrolls and the earnings of business and industrial workers will raise more than enough revenue to meet all requirements for years.

The only excuse for increasing the Social Security tax rates is to build up a huge reserve fund. And the only purpose of this is to use the fund as a lending program as a means of refinancing the national debt. There is no doubt that the Social Security plan, in so far as old age retirement is concerned, can be operated on a pay-as-you-go basis. And it should be run that way because the cost will be no much less.

Some people have the loop-es-lon that the industrial disputes courts only issue injunctions against labor. It is important to note that is NOT true. A Federal Court in San Francisco, on the application of seamen, issued a temporary order restraining the Federal Government from enforcement of the continuous discharge book provision of the Copeland Safety-at-Sea Act. Seamen who do not like this discharge book law are to be commended for fighting it in court instead of by calling another strike.
